The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

BUY DOWN NOW... SAVE OIL

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Life On The East End Of Long Island 100 Years Ago

By Dan Rattiner

There were no paved roads in the Hamptons or on the North Fork in 1903. There were horses, horse-drawn carriages and wagons and coaches and dirt tracks. In the entire United States there were only 144 miles of paved road.

There were no parking lots in the Hamptons in 1903. There was no need for parking lots because there were no automobiles, though very rich men in Manhattan and along Long Island's Gold Coast had them. On rare occasion, one would be driven out, as an adventure, from one of those places. Everyone would run out to see. It would take fifteen hours to drive one from the city. In the whole United States that year, there were fewer than 8,000 cars.

There was no hospital in the Hamptons in 1903. Women gave birth at home, attended by a midwife or, if possible, a doctor with a horse and buggy who made house calls. The average life expectancy in the United States was forty-seven.

Ninety percent of doctors in the United States never attended college but did go to privately run "medical schools" for their training.

People began thinking of building a hospital in Southampton during that year. Fundraising had begun. It would be built and opened in 1909.

The main activities for people living in the Hamptons and on the North Fork in 1903 were farming, hunting, clamming and fishing. The harvest was taken to Riverhead by horse-drawn cart where there was a big produce auction and railroad hub with tracks leading to Manhattan.

The big thing people hoped for in 1903 was that electricity would come to the Hamptons someday soon.

Tracks for the railroad, which had been laid out to Patchogue from New York City in the 1870s, had been extended to Southampton and Montauk in 1895. It might be possible to send produce to the city aboard railroad cars loaded at the various stations, and a few people were testing that out.

But the big thing people hoped for in 1903 was that electricity would come to the Hamptons someday soon. Much of New York City had been electrified by then. The trolleys were running there, as were the subways. In Huntington, a company called the Huntington Gas and Electric Company had gotten a permit and had opened for business generating electricity. That town was now installing a trolley line on Main Street, though it had not yet opened. On the East End, if there were not yet electric lights, there were, in certain buildings, gas lights. But for the most part, people burned oil in lanterns for lights as they always did. They were using kerosene now, a petroleum product. Before that, they had used whale oil.

Two years earlier, in 1901, an electric line was taken aboard a steamboat and sailed across the Niagara River near Buffalo connecting the United States and Canada, the first international electrical hookup.

The following year, 1902, Canada passed a law prohibiting poor people from entering the country for any reason.

The American Flag had 45 stars in 1903. Not yet states were Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Hawaii and Alaska.

The Parrish Art Museum in Southampton had been built in 1902 the same year Canada banned poor people. It was gas-lit and its construction had been made possible by funding from the wealthy of Manhattan who had discovered the railroad link from the city and had built big, unheated summer mansions in the Hamptons down by the water. The men would bring their wives, children and servants out for

There are two things going on with the war. One is, which is the editorial opinion of Dan's Papers, that we should never have gotten into this and that we oppose it. The other is that we have soldiers over there fighting and dying on our behalf. Saturday, April 12, Linda Shapiro and Dan Rattiner will host a benefit for our soldiers, called Dan's Papers SOS (Support our Soldiers) at the Star Room in Wainscott, 5:30 to 7:30. Admission will be free, but you must bring a letter to a soldier. That's the benefit part. We are making arrangements to have all letters individually sent to individual soldiers serving in the Gulf. CARY GROSSMAN

In his 33 years Cary touched so many lives. He was beautiful and he lived a beautiful life. He lived more life in his 33 years than most people live or know about in a lifetime. He was the most gentle, loving, fabulous son his mother, Lynne, and his father, Robert, could ever wish for. He was the best brother his sister Alison could ever have. They shared a very special relationship. He was the best friend and most loving husband Christine could ever have.....they were inseparable. He was the best uncle Daniela could ever have. He was the best brother-in law David could ever have. He was the best grandson Annette could ever have. He was the best grandson Marian could ever have.

Cary was an inspiration to us all. To those who loved Cary, and were helped by him, his memory will be eternal. Spending time with him, being around Cary, you felt as if you were with a celebrity, he was larger than life. He could light up a room with the power of his smile. Cary's outsized persona had the gravitational pull of the sun, you just couldn't help but be pulled in by the strength of his character and vibrancy. If he was your friend.....you were made!

He grew up in Head of the Harbor and Montauk, New York. As a little boy he worked in and around the waters of Montauk. His passion for the sea and his love of boating was an integral part of his life. As a teenager while working at the Montauk Yacht Club he became an adept boat handler and was loved by all the members of the club. Later in life, he traveled extensively on the water pursuing his love of the sea. He also had a passion for his two Labrador Retrievers who were often seen riding with him on his waverunner.

Born on November 19, 1969 in New York, he attended high school in Smithtown and while working in the family business as a Sales Executive he earned his college degree. In October 2000, he married Christine Zasucha in East Hampton.. Last August he moved from Tribeca to Miami with Chris to start his own company, CG Industries. His dream was to establish CG Industries as a leader in the corrugated packaging industry. In his life, his goals and achievements were nothing short of spectacular!

Some people come into our lives and quietly go. Others stay for a while and leave footprints on our hearts and we are never the same. We mourn, oh how we mourn the death of our dear Cary. He was truly an extraordinary gift for life, for hope, for friendship, for love and generosity. He was open, he was guileless, he was one of a kind. In our hearts and in our memories his light and spirit will be with us always.

What we have once treasured, we can never lose. All that we love deeply becomes a part of us. Cary Grossman left this earth on March 6, 2003 due to a sudden heart attack in his home in Florida. Cary, we will love you forever.

Rabbi David Gelfand and Cantor Debra Stein Davidson of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons performed a beautiful ceremony honoring Cary's life. The eulogies and the ceremony were profoundly moving revealing to all that the world had lost a very special person. Cary is now resting at the Shaarey Pardes Cemetery in Springs.

The family has suggested memorial contributions to Canine Companions for Independence-The Cary Grossman Sponsorship Fund, P.O. Box 205, Farmingdale, NY 11735-0205. CCI is a non-profit organization that provides highly trained assistant dogs for people with disabilities.

"Do not stand by my grave and weep
I am not dead, I do not sleep

I am a thousand winds that blow,
I am a diamond glint on snow.

I am the sunset on ripened grain,
I am the gentle autumn rain.

When you awake in the autumn hush,
I am the swift uplifting rush.

Of quiet birds in circling flight,
I am the soft starshine at night.

Do not stand by my grave and cry,
I am not there, I did not die.

the first time on a Friday in June. (The trip took two and a half hours! How about that!) The men would go back on Monday and then come out every weekend. The women and children would stay all summer and enjoy the healthful quality of the air and waters, go swimming, fishing, sailing, and play that new sport, tennis. They would also enjoy the quaint, rural atmosphere of the Hamptons with all the farmers and fishermen. There was also another new sport, but it was just for the men. Golf.

Exactly when golf was brought to America from Scotland is a matter of some debate, but in 1891, a group of wealthy Southampton "summer people" bought 80 acres of prime Southampton real estate and built a 12-hole golf course with the labor of 150 Shinnecock Indians. Four years later the course was expanded to 18 holes.

The second U.S. Golf Open was played at Shinnecock in 1896. Among those competing was a 16-year-old "colored" boy, John Shippen, who worked as a caddy at the club and whose father was a Presbyterian minister on the nearby Shinnecock Indian Reservation. Shippen finished an impressive fifth in the tournament and went on to play in four other U.S. Opens, becoming a black pioneer in what was considered a "white" man's sport.

For the wealthy women, another major activity during Southampton summers was doing watercolors and taking painting lessons, and several of them got together and convinced William Merritt Chase, a well-known American landscape painter, to start an art school in Shinnecock in the late 1880s. Students and teacher could often be found outdoors on the dunes on sunny days and at indoor studios on rainy ones.

There was still another new sport that was all the rage among the local men. It was called baseball, and it was played with great frequency at schools and at sandlots around the area in the summertime. A stick would serve as a bat. You'd fashion your own mitt.

Almost 20% of all homes in America had one or more servants in 1903.

There were no telephones in the Hamptons in 1903.

From New York City, where there were telephones, the cost of a phone call from Manhattan to Denver was eleven dollars. That was the "connection" price. You could talk up to three minutes for that eleven dollars. But reception was poor, and it was very hard to hear.

Only 14 percent of the homes in America had bathtubs in 1903. Few people in the Hamptons could afford them. Also, there was no public water. Bath day, as it was almost everywhere in the country, was Saturday. A tub was set up in the kitchen of the house and filled with water carried in pails from the well outside. There was soap.

Most women washed their hair once a month. Shampoo was a combination of borax and egg yolks.

East Hampton's Main Street was then, as it is now, the widest thoroughfare on the East End. In 1903, however, it consisted of two sets of dirt tracks, one in front of the houses on the north, the other in front of the houses on the south, each the width of wagon wheels, but running parallel to one another separated by a broad grassy place that ran the entire length of Main Street from the town pond to the windmill. There were great elm trees, just as there are now, along both sides of Main Street in front of the houses alongside the dirt tracks. A group of housewives in the town, concerned about the street's dust and what the citizenry felt was an ugly new Long Island Railroad station, formed a group in 1895 to take responsibility for these and many other problems of the growing village.

Gateways To New York, Greenport, The Hamptons And The Island Of Rhodes

By Dan Rattiner

Perhaps the most sensational piece of architecture for our generation is the Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain, designed by Frank Gehry. You are in a small Spanish coastal city with cobblestone streets, storybook brick buildings and you come upon THIS. It has become the symbol of that city.

A generation ago, another Guggenheim Museum was built along Fifth Avenue in Manhattan and many considered it the most sensational piece of architecture of its time. Along with the Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty and the Twin Towers, it too became the symbol of a city.

Last month, the people who run the Guggenheim Foundation announced they were abandoning plans to build what might have been a new symbol of New York City, a downtown Guggenheim Museum on the East River waterfront. Designed by Frank Gehry, it looked from the outside like a series of silver gift-wrapping ribbons that had been curled into a magnificent ten-story present. This surely would have been a gateway to the city, at least for those arriving by boat. The Guggenheim also closed its museum in Las Vegas designed by Rem Koolhaas, the Dutch architect. In these hard times, the Guggenheim is making cutbacks.

Architecture as the symbol of or a gateway to a community has always seemed to me something very important. Certainly the Statue of Liberty serves that purpose in New York, though arguably you could say the whole skyline of the city also serves that purpose. The Eiffel Tower surely is that structure in Paris. Places that do not have gateways, I have always thought, were missing something.

I envision a twenty-foot tall statue of an East End bayman at the western entrance of the bridge that goes over the Shinnecock Canal.

Here on the East End, there are numerous gateway buildings and statues. The Montauk Lighthouse is one, at least for mariners. The Big Duck in Flanders is a gateway to the South Fork from the North Fork and the enormous Linda Scott sculpture Stargazer in a field alongside the Manorville Road has become a gateway to the Hamptons.

And there are other gateway structures. A huge twenty-foot metal osprey sculpture atop a steel beam salvaged from Ground Zero stands on a pier in Greenport, and has become a gateway to that village. Mayor Kapell has also arranged another symbol for the village, a merry-go-round in a beautiful glass building in a waterfront park. It is now hard to think of Greenport without thinking of these two structures. (Although for five years before that, the gateway structure was a three masted schooner anchored in the harbor, the Regina Maris, which has since been towed to Glen Cove where, after efforts to save her failed, she sank. At the present time, her masts grace that city's waterfont.)

I've been thinking of other possible gateway structures for our area. I envision a twenty-foot tall statue of an East End bayman at the western entrance of the bridge that goes over the Shinnecock Canal. His hand is raised, palm to the front, as in "Stop, come no further." People pay no attention.

There ought to be a statue of East Hampton's most famous citizen, Marilyn, Monroe in town somewhere. Anywhere.

There ought to be a statue of Westhampton Beach's most famous citizen, P. T. Barnum.It should be up at the Suffolk County Airport alongside the antique Korean War Fighter Jet parked on the lawn there.

I cannot think of a gateway for Sag Harbor, though there is a small community that thinks of itself as the gateway to that place. You see its name on the back of pickup trucks along Noyac Road. They bear bumper stickers that read NOYAC, GATEWAY TO SAG HARBOR. You have to go through that community to get to Sag Harbor from Southampton.

Back in New York City, there was to have been a huge statue — sixty-feet high, on the eastern shore of the East River in Queens — of Queen Catherine of Braganza of Portugal for whom that borough was named. It was actually built, designed and its construction directed by artist Audrey Flack of East Hampton, who spent two years of her life on the project. Today, however, the statue lies in a foundry in upstate New York after politicians in the community, most notably Al Sharpton, roused the populace to a groundswell of protest that ultimately caused the abandonment of that project. The controversy was caused, supposedly, by the discovery that the queen's family had been in the slave trade business in the 1600s.

I think there ought to be a statue of a marathon runner, twenty-feet high, poised on top of the Verrazano Bridge, running toward Brooklyn, but that's just me.

They say attendance at the Statue of Liberty is down by about 20% since the events of September 11, 2001. People are afraid that the statue might be next, I guess.

Once, touring Greece, I came to the jetties at the entrance to the harbor at Rhodes. Here stood the Colossus of Rhodes, people told me. It straddled the inlet, one sandaled foot on each jetty. Ships sailed between the legs. The Colossus held a spear.

People had drawings of the Colossus. It was no more. But people could look out and they could imagine Rhodes in its heyday, with the Colossus standing guard.

We should build lots of gateway buildings and statues. They become meaningful to the people who see them and they help to define a community.

Time Change

The East Coast Gets The Job Done While The West Coast Sleeps

By Dan Rattiner

The East Coast is hard working, serious, responsible, industrious. The West Coast is laid back, frivolous, spoiled and adolescent. Those are the raps, anyway.

I am in San Francisco for a week. Up at the San Francisco Zoo, there is a prominent sign reading IT IS NOT TOO LATE TO SAVE THE WILDLIFE OF MADAGASCAR. It is signed by the director of the museum who drives a gas-guzzling Land Rover.

I think I know why these two coasts are the way they are. I write this as we go off to war against Iraq. The news is fast breaking. On the East Coast everybody is, I am sure, watching it minute by minute. Not here. Here everybody is asleep.

I mean that literally. It's the time change. How would you feel, relentlessly, day after day, you woke up in the morning to find out everything had already happened? That's what happens here every day because of the time change. And by the time you shower and shave, have your latte with a shot of espresso and get ready for the world, the world is already done doing whatever it did and isn't interested in hearing from you. So what do you do? You go roller blading, that's what you do.

It certainly cannot be denied that decisions about the major stuff going on in the world are made in Moscow, London, New York, and Washington. The United Nations is on the East Coast. The buttons that fire all the big weapons are there, too. As the sun rises here in San Francisco, the day is half over in New York and Washington, people are driving home from work in Europe, and in Moscow they are already headed for bed.

Yet the West Coast — San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Diego — is filled with people. They've got to do something. So they make movies, sit in front of video screens writing computer code, drink coffee, and eat very expensive, organic, no-pesticide-fresh-and-good-for-you food. They work out a lot. Not long ago here in San Francisco, I passed an old six-story apartment building inside which somebody had persuaded all the tenants to open windows and hang, outside on steel beams tied with big strong ropes, various pieces of living room furniture. This was Art. You saw it from your car passing on the freeway. I think they kept it up a month.

On the East Coast, the mind is narrowly focused on serious international issues from 9 to 5. Things are thought through. Meetings are held. Orders issued. Here on the West Coast there is lots of looking through huge telescopes at various planets and stars. Most of the world's biggest telescopes are here. The planets and stars are not going anywhere soon.

Personally, when I come here to San Francisco, and I come here a lot because some of my family is here, I get the whole experience. But I still run Dan's Papers, which comes out weekly on the East Coast, and I have to keep up. So I call the office a lot.

"What's happening?"

"It's all over."

"Any news?"

"Yeah. But we're all tired and going home."

"Tell me."

"Ah, it's a long story. Don't you keep up out there?"

"It's hard to find The New York Times. And on TV, all anybody ever watches is sports. The Lakers are having a tough year."

The Lakers. They were named that when the team was founded in Minneapolis, before they moved to Los Angeles. Plenty of lakes in Minnesota. Change the name? Leave it the Lakers. It's an amusing and wry irony, filled with angst.

The earth spins. Seen from afar, there's a mass of twinkling lights on the East Coast and in Europe — only separated by the Atlantic Puddle. Everywhere else, it's pretty dark.

If you think the West Coast is out of it, try New Zealand. I've been there. Loved it. About three million people and two hundred million animals. When I was there, they had TV, but only the equivalent of local public access. The satellites were just getting into place. So the news would soon be coming in, but so late they'd feel even worse than the West Coast.

We had to leave New Zealand before the satellites came. We had made so many friends. As we were leaving, they all said, "come again," and we hugged and kissed and said we would and meant it. That was ten years ago. I still get handwritten letters on airmail stationery asking when. Soon, we say. It's eighteen hours by plane.

If the West Coast is like the guy who comes into the bar as the cops are leaving after arresting the drunks, New Zealand is like after the bar has been cleaned up, the broken mirrors replaced and the place reopened. When there are big decisions to make in the world, they were made yesterday. And they were made above the equator, which, incidentally, is seven hours flying time due north from New Zealand as it is.

Basically, New Zealand is known for having done one interesting thing on the international stage, which is to say, "The hell with you all, don't bring anything nuclear down here. Other than that, we don't care."

They are also pretty good at shearing sheep and sailing boats. Probably the best there is at both these things.

As the sun rises here in San Francisco, the day is half over in New York and Washington, people are driving home from work in Europe...

The name of this group was the Ladies Village Improvement Society.

There were no antibiotics in 1903 and there wouldn't be any for more than 40 years. In 1903, the leading causes of death in America were pneumonia and influenza, tuberculosis and diarrhea, in that order.

Coca Cola was available over the counter at pharmacies in the area. It contained cocaine. Also available in pharmacies were heroin and morphine. "Heroin clears the complexion, gives buoyancy to the mind, regulates the stomach and the bowels and is, in fact, a perfect guardian of health," one pharmacy advertised.

A two-cell concrete jail with barred windows was built for inmates on Bridgehampton's Main Street in 1902.

No balloon, dirigible or airplane had ever flown over the eastern end of Long Island before 1903. It would be ten more years before the first one did.

There was no TV or radio, nor would there be for another ten years (in the case of radio) and forty years (in the case of TV).

The most popular individual on Long Island's East End in 1903 was President Teddy Roosevelt. He had been in Montauk five years before as a soldier returning with the rest of the American Army to recuperate from the fight in the Cuban campaign of the Spanish-American War in 1898. He was a war hero. Because of him, President McKinley visited Montauk. Two months later, Roosevelt left Montauk, and two months after that he was elected governor of New York. The next year, as a national hero, he ran for the office of Vice President of the United States teamed with President McKinley, was elected, and within six months, after the assassination by pistol shot of McKinley in Buffalo, New York, assumed the Presidency. Roosevelt was going to run for re-election in 1904 and local Long Islanders were delighted.

President Roosevelt was also planning legislation to "bust the trusts," the great business monopolies run by people such as J.P. Morgan and John D. Rockefeller, who made millions and, because there were no national income taxes, kept it all. Shortly, Roosevelt would introduce legislation creating the first income taxes in America.

Many of the wealthy of New York City coming to the Hamptons by Long Island Railroad in the summertime with their familes and servants were among these millionaires.

The railroad trip to Manhattan was obviously a great opportunity for local people wishing to visit that place. Few had ever gone before. Some of the buildings in that city were more than 20-stories tall. There was a new invention called the electric elevator that could take you straight up.

East Enders were also anxious to see the two new wonders of the age in the big city, the Statue of Liberty, which now stood on an island in the harbor, and the Brooklyn Bridge which, believe it or not, spanned the East River.

Of course, both of these marvels had been designed by one or another of the great geniuses

Best Bridgehampton Poet

It's A Big Job For A Small Town But Somebody's Got To Do It

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, we here at Dan's Papers received the following press release.

"FREE POETRY CONTEST OPEN TO BRIDGEHAMPTON RESIDENTS

"Owings Mills, Md. (USA) - The International Library of Poetry has announced that $58,000 in prizes will be awarded this year in the International Open Poetry Contest. Poets from the Bridgehampton area, particularly beginners, are welcome to try to win their share of over 250 prizes. The deadline for the contest is June 30, 2003. The contest is open to everyone and entry is FREE."

The press release went on to say that entrants should enter ONE poem only, which should be 20 lines or less, and the poet's name and address should appear on the top of the page.

A friend was in my office at the time I received this. He is, in fact, a local poet. I asked him what he thought of it.

"Scam," he said. "I know all about this. All the poets I know know all about this. They have no interest in good poetry. They will publish anything they get. And they will try every which way to get you to spend money with them for having been interested in your poem, which they are not."

I decided not to publish this press release. I also decided to look into it. Doing a search on the Internet, I found all sorts of attorneys interested in suing these people and poets tearfully writing about how they had been had.

"I cried like a baby after realizing that I was just ripped off. I cannot express the deep, emotional anguish this has caused me," one sensitive female poet wrote.

20/20 did a piece on the International Library of Poetry one year. The Consumer Protection Division of Maryland is involved. Humorist Dave Barry wrote about them. Attorney Charles Marshall of Beeler, Schad & Diamond, P. C. in Chicago is gathering information for a class action lawsuit.

Turns out, this outfit DOES make every entrant a semi-finalist. They contact you and they tell you they are publishing an anthology of semi-finalists. Not all of them, mind you, but whoever among them would send in $50. If you want your poem edited to make it nicer there is a charge for that, too. And if you want a proofed copy there is a charge for that. And of course you can purchase the book. After you've spent about $350, you get this hardbound book of poetry, very official looking, with your poem in it.

On their website, you can click on "anthologies" and read the contents of every poem ever included during the last five years. There are more than 300 anthologies. And if you figure 6 poems a page and 600 pages in an anthology and multiply it all out, you get a business that is bringing in about $20 million dollars a year. There's some guy with a big yacht, a waterfront house in Fort Lauderdale, a Pied-a-Terre in Paris, a farm in Tuscany and for all I know a house in the Hamptons as a result of this. Also, after all these years, the home office for this outfit is no longer in somebody's basement, but at 1 Poetry Plaza in Owing Mills, Md. I have not been there, but it sounds like a whole campus of buildings at this point. Probably the largest and most successful organization involved with poetry today.

But is it a scam? I'm not so sure it is. Frankly, it sounds like a typical parent's behavior to me. Your twelve-year-old writes something that is just awful, and you praise him or her and they go out and have what your child wrote framed and hung on the wall. I'm sure you parents would be happy to pay somebody to do all that for you and, whatever it cost, feel it was worth it.

Maybe poets are just sensitive crybabies. They write drivel. Somebody encourages them, tells them they are a semi-finalist, lies to them and tells them it is good when it isn't and offers, for a fee, to knock themselves out getting the drivel out there. That's worth something. Is it the lie that makes it a scam?

I mean, are all these people, getting a hardbound book with their poem in it, being cheated out of anything? How many poets do you know who have made millions writing their poems?

Well, I decided, the only way to find out, since I am an investigative reporter, is to write some drivel, submit it via the Internet site, and then, with my helmet and camouflage uniform on, head on in there and see what would happen.

I clicked on "Enter Contest" and I entered my poem. Here it is. It's called DEATH TO SADDAM.

This is a poem about Saddam Hussein,

Whose evil ways come again and again,

We must stop him right now,

Don't have a cow,

Even if France and Russia know how to stop him by containing him within Baghdad and his other garbage bin.

Go Bush Go.

I clicked on enter, and there it was, entered. There were now offered, inasmuch as I was an "entrant," all sorts of optional things I might do, some of which were free and others which were, quite obviously, going to cost money. For instance, for $49.95, which they would be happy to charge to my credit card — fill out this form, please — I could get a tote bag with DEATH TO SADDAM and the rest of my poem printed on it. I could join a poetry seminar, which would cost money, I could get myself invited to the Spring Poetry Convention and World Poetry Bash, which I was sure would cost money, I could send somebody a greeting card with my poem on it, which I'm also sure would cost money.

And then there were the free things. I could click on "Poetry in Motion" and see all my words fluttering around on my computer screen. Cow. Baghdad. France. Garbage. I could display my poem on my computer screen, which I did, by clicking on the icon and there it was, DEATH TO SADDAM, in a pretty type on a blue background with a border of leaves and berries around it and — hey — I could print it out on my color printer. I did.

Also free was a place to click called "Having Trouble Rhyming?" They asked me for a word. I wrote "Hussein." Immediately there appeared 491 different rhymes that would work with "Hussein," some of them quite poignant. For example, there was bane, brain, feign, reign, vain, abstain, campaign, cocaine, complain, detain, ball and chain, acid rain and castle in spain and as you see that isn't a bad poem JustLikeThat isn't it? And I haven't even got past the rhymes they gave after the letter G.

Another free place you can go on the Internet site is to "View the Winners" from prior contests. These were not the semi-finalists, these were not even the finalists. These were the very best of the best. I read a few. They had the names of the people who wrote them. And they were pretty good, if you ask me, by which I mean they were emotion filled, unusual, incomprehensible, and seemed pretty close to the poetry of T. S. Eliot, whose poems, notably "The Love Song J. Alfred Prufrock," I had to memorize as a college senior.

"Let us go then, you and I,
When evening is spreading out against the sky
Like a patient etherized upon a table;
Let us go, through certain half-deserted streets,
The muttering retreats
Of restless nights in one-night cheap hotels
And sawdust restaurants with oyster-shells..."

The only way this is a scam, I figure, is if they tell you to send them money for something and then they don't do the something. I found no evidence of this. I assume they send you the tote bag. Certainly they can afford it. And surely they give out all these prizes, first prize for the best poem in an anthology gets $2500 and runner-up gets $1000. I mean, you know you enter and you might lose. And the prizes, all together, for a year, amount to just $58,000. They tell you that.

The other thing, where they breathlessly tell you you have been selected as a semi-finalist and are eligible to be in an anthology, well, come on, that's what parents do and when we are 11 years old. We believe them and when we are grownups we are supposed to be able to figure out the truth.

After all, there's Ed McMahon on an envelope once a year telling you that YOU HAVE JUST WON THE $1,000,000 JACKPOT and it turns out what they want you to do is subscribe to some magazines.

I mean, hey, grow up.

Wait, there's someone at the door. Really? DEATH TO SADDAM? You're going to send me $58,000? This is incredible. I can't believe it. Wait. I have to call my mother.

PIPING PLOVER COMPROMISE

The US Fish and Wildlife Service is putting up keep out fences along the dunes in West Hampton Beach to protect the nests of piping plovers, an endangered species. They have done this every year, but in the past, the residents have threatened to arrest them for blocking their access to the ocean beach with their fences. This year a compromise has been worked out satisfactory to all. The plover nests will be fenced off, but every three or four houses, there will be pass throughs for the local residents. There are now 1,525 plover nests between North Carolina and Newfoundland. The wildlife service counted them.

POLICE OFFICER WHO KILLED A WESTHAMPTON MAN IS NAMED

Authorities have identified Suffolk County Trooper Robert Behrle as the officer who shot and killed a Westhampton man attacking him on Old Country Road in Quogue last Saturday. There are two witnesses to the incident. Behrle, a 10-year veteran, chased down the driver of a car speeding erratically that Saturday afternoon. The car, a 1989 Toyota, spun out on Old Country Road, the driver got out and, ignoring a call to stop, ran into a nearby woods. He then reappeared with a limb from a tree in his hand and attacked Behrle as he approached the Toyota. Behrle pulled a gun, which the driver knocked aside with the tree limb. The driver then knocked Behrle to the ground with the tree limb. Behrle crawled after his gun and as he continued being hit, grabbed it and fired three shots, killing Victor Vasquez, 29, a native of Guatemala. Behrle has been placed on desk duty pending an investigation.

The Facts

A Few Minor Details You Might Have Missed With This War Against Iraq

By Dan Rattiner

I've been in San Francisco for this past week. When I left East Hampton to go to JFK, Bush was still trying to get his second resolution passed at the U. N. When I flew back, with security at San Francisco ten-fold tighter, we were at war. I pray for our troops.

When Bush made his war plans four months ago, there was some debate about whether the invasion force ought to be 50,000 or 100,000 troops to chase down the ragtag 100,000-man Iraqi army. Eventually, Bush decided upon 230,000. These include 120,000 men and women from our full time all-volunteer army. It also includes 110,000 National Guard troops. In case you forgot, these are our neighbors: carpenters, insurance men, restaurant owners and shop keepers who signed up years ago to serve weekends at bases around the country. In exchange they got college scholarships, long-term retirement benefits and other perks and they didn't have to serve full time, unless there was a national emergency. Now there is a national emergency. They've left their jobs and are carrying rifles into harm's way in the Gulf. They agreed to do this. But many are way out of shape.

What do we call this? Gulf War II? The Like Father Like Son War? The father spent two weeks trying to persuade congress that fighting Iraq was a necessary war and he succeeded in getting a resolution from them. The son spent two weeks trying to persuade the United Nations that fighting Iraq was a necessary war and he went about it by telling them he didn't need their approval and they turned him down.

Our goal is to find all the biological and chemical weapons Iraq has, the "weapons of mass destruction," and destroy them. Also to get Saddam Hussein out of office and hold him accountable for war crimes. As you read this, the fight to do so is underway.

As near as I can figure, the war crimes involve poison gas that was sprayed on Iranian troops during the Iraq-Iran War between 1980 and 1988. After the war, Hussein's planes sprayed more of the chemicals on the Kurds in northern Iraq to quell a rebellion there. The spraying of these chemicals, which was done by the Iraqi air force at close range, spraying as if from crop dusters, effectively stopped Kurd resistance. It killed 5,000 people, injured 10,000.

Hussein was in Tunisia two days before we declared war, and he told officials there that indeed they had these chemical weapons then but they used them up or, after the Gulf War and the sanctions, they destroyed them and don't have them now. If he's telling the truth and they don't have any now, we won't find any, I guess.

An interesting question is, where did he get those chemical weapons? He had no plants to make them back then. Beginning in 1980, with the Soviet Union backing the Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran, the Americans and French backed Iraq. At the time, both America and France were producing chemical weapons. We aren't any more. We've renounced them. But back then, encouraging Saddam Hussein to attack, we GAVE him chemical weapons. They came, according to The New York Times, from a laboratory in Virginia where they were produced. There was also a laboratory in Toulouse, France, which made these chemicals. According to the Times, because such careful records are kept when chemicals such as this are made, it is possible to determine that 80% of the Iraqi arsenal of chemical weapons came from Virginia and 20% from Toulouse. We gave them to him and urged him to use the stuff against the Iranians. He did.

Of course, all that is history now. Old news. Now we punish him for doing what we told him. How times change.

There was also an interesting article in the Times recently about whether or not chemical or biological weapons are "weapons of mass destruction." The upshot of the article was that, unless you have an entire air force fly over spraying them, in which case tens of thousands of people will die, they are no more dangerous than just regular bombs. Explode a quart of the stuff somewhere and twenty people might be killed. The air quickly dissipates the potency. Might as well drop a bomb.

Doesn't sound like "weapons of mass destruction" to me, if a weapon of mass destruction kills hundreds of thousands at a pop.

Support for the war in America was dropping steadily just before the war began. Then the French announced that no matter what, they would veto our resolution to wage war. From that point on the enemy was the French. Who liked them anyway? Had they so soon forgotten what we did for them? Dissing America like that by not supporting the war resolution — who did they think they were? American resolve to fight the war thus went back up, partly because of a backlash against the French.

And there were five other reasons we had to go to war before April. One was that Tony Blair's government was going to fail if we didn't declare before then. (The English had 20,000 troops at the ready.) Two was the American economy had begun seriously tanking because nobody knew whether we were coming or going. A declaration of war solves that. Three was our troops were sitting around doing nothing in a foreign land getting bit by sand fleas and that couldn't go on much longer. Four was Bush had diplomatically painted himself into a corner. And five was the heat, wind and resulting sandstorms of April, a known upcoming meteorological phenomenon that would make fighting awful.

An interesting question is, where did he get those chemical weapons? He had no plants to make them back then.

Who could need more reasons than that?

There's been a lot of talk that the war will last two weeks, maybe three. We'll drop a lot of smart bombs on them and they'll raise the white flag.

How much will all this cost? Well, in lives it is incalculable. In dollars, anywhere from $50 billion to $200 billion, including the occupation of the country after it is over.

Who is going to pay for it? Certainly not us. We're in a recession. Nobody is addressing that issue yet, but my guess is nobody is addressing it because we intend for the Iraqis to pay for it. They've got the oil to do it. We'll take it out of the ground and truck it home. They've got more oil under the ground than anybody except the Saudis. Maybe a hundred years worth of the stuff. They'll never miss it. And we'll be awash with it before Bush runs for re-election.

A burly taxi driver with a beard and a heavy accent drove me from the Jitney stop in Flushing to JFK for my trip to San Francisco. The traffic was bad. We went slowly.

"Where are you from?" I asked.

"Guess," he said.

I guessed Turkey.

"No. Afghanistan."

"Well the Turks migrated long ago to where they are from just north of Afghanistan. How long have you been in America?" I asked.

"Seven years," he said.

I asked why he came.

"We were having a little trouble with the Russians," he said.

I asked him his thoughts about Iraq.

"This whole thing has been a terrible thing for me and my family," he said. "We have come to America. It is the best country. But all my friends, they have abandoned us. They do not want to associate with Muslims. I understand this. They think we are all bad."

"Would you fight for America?" I asked.

"There is no place I know where there is such freedom. I would fight for this place."

"What about Saddam Hussein?"

"There are all sorts of Muslim sects. There are the Sunnis. There are the Shiites. Neither of these preaches war against anybody. But now comes Osama bin Laden and he forms a new sect, a warrior sect. They call it Wahabi. They want to fight everybody who doesn't agree with them. They blew up the Buddhist statues in my country. They forced us to obey their ways or die. They attacked America and the Pentagon. They are bad people. And everybody is hunting them down and killing them and doing a very good job of it. Everybody in the world. In two or three years, they will be gone.

"But now comes this thing with Saddam Hussein, and many Muslims, particularly young men, because of it, will join this Wahabi sect to defend Islam. This is bad, very bad. It is a bad idea, this war."

We arrived at JFK and I unloaded my luggage.

"Do you think the Iraqis can send missiles to New York?" he asked me.

"Impossible," I said. "He doesn't have any weapons that can do that. It is not something to worry about."

I gave him his fare, and on top of that, a big tip. He raised his right hand, his palm open toward me, and smiled. He had one gold tooth. I high-fived his palm, which is what he wanted me to do. And then we hugged each other, right there in front of the Delta terminal. Then he drove off.

Well, the decision has now been made, we have gone to war, and we all must fall into line behind our commander in chief and our fighting men. May this happen quickly. May it happen with as little loss of life as possible. May it happen the way our commander in chief wants it to happen. May the world be better for it. I pray for all that, and for a long and sustained peace in the world afterward.

who lived in the center of the art and architectural world at the turn of the century: Paris.

The possibility of visiting the tallest structure in the world in that grand city, the Eiffel Tower, was more remote. That would require a long and dangerous ride aboard an ocean liner. In 1903, Cunard began construction on the Lusitania, which, when launched in 1907, would be the fastest ship of her size at the time. (The Titanic would not be launched for another five years.)

The dangers of ship travel across the ocean were fresh in everyone's minds because of the frequent shipwrecks that took place along the ocean, mostly schooners and sailing ships bound from or to New York Harbors from Europe. That year, there had been one wreck on the Long Island coastline, a freighter hauling granite slabs from Maine to Philadelphia. It came ashore in Far Rockaway. All were rescued.

Every five miles, more or less, all along the beach from Montauk to Coney Island, there were on duty strong young men who belonged to the Life Saving Service of the United States. They had wooden headquarter houses at the beach, rowboats they could launch through the surf, ropes and life rings to throw. They were well trained. There was no United States Coast Guard in 1903.

A near disaster had occurred years earlier when the largest ship afloat at that time, while sailing past Montauk Point, hit an underwater rock. The year was 1862 and the ship was the 700-foot long Great Eastern, a huge, double-hulled transatlantic steamship that carried enough coal to make it to Australia and back. It also had masts and a complete set of sails. The rock it hit tore a hole six-feet long in the hull, but the ship, traveling at a slower speed, made its way safely to New York Harbor. The rock had pierced the outer hull but not the inner hull.

During the subsequent repairs, a dead workman was found between the hulls, apparently trapped in there by accident when the ship was built in 1857.

The population of what are now the five East End towns was less than 10,000 in 1903. The population of that same area today is 130,000. The population of Las Vegas, Nevada, in 1903 was 30.

The great natural disasters that people remembered and talked about on eastern Long Island in 1903 were the great fire that destroyed the famous and elegant resort, Manhanset House, on Shelter Island in 1896 and the Blizzard of 1888, which occured in March of that year. The Manhanset had been one of several great resorts built for the wealthy people from New York City who came out for the summer to Shelter Island. Because there was no railroad there, great steamships brought the men on the weekends. The wives and children came down to the dock to meet these "daddy boats," as they were called.

The Blizzard of '88 hit without warning. (No TV, no Weather Channel). The snows buried every town on the East End, some of them reporting snowdrifts of 15 feet. Communication was cut off for more than a week. Nobody could get through to anywhere. Many people died.

This is what life was like one hundred years ago on eastern Long Island.

The Sheltered Islander

Observations of an Islander #241
Plum Crazy

"On June 1, after a half century under the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Plum Island will be taken over by the new Department of Homeland Security. Born in the infancy of the Cold War, the Plum Island Animal Disease Center has long been a place of mystery. A one-time Army base, the 850-acre island off eastern Long Island is home to the nation's only diagnostic facility for dangerous animal diseases. Now, with a strike by maintenance workers in its eighth month and a plan to transfer the island to the nation's new security agency, congressional investigators are examining Plum Island operations, including allegations that replacements for the 76 striking maintenance workers were not properly trained to work at a sensitive government laboratory. Critics cite ferry accidents, power losses and security questions as concerns." Yahoo News, 3/18/03

Blah, blah, blah. People on Shelter Island have known that the dangers of Plum Island for years. It's not just animal disease experimentation there; there's other secret stuff as well.

There are some strange people who live on Shelter Island that islanders have been suspicious are actually genetic experiments planted here by the Plum Islanders to see if the new hybrid strain will take. There's a handsome construction man who wears shorts in the dead of winter — probably genetically engineered for the cold. There is a lovely woman who walks everywhere on the Island — how do her feet hold up? There are several people who psychically seem to know when a fresh load of really choice items arrives at the Goodies Section. Are these people with special powers just random rolls of the DNA dice? Or is something else afoot?

In the summertime, mixed in among the nice summer people and tourists, are some people who are certifiably insane. They think they are Kings or Queens who have been robbed of their countries and forced to dwell among the serfs. I submit that they are the Plum Crazy.

It's all part of Plum Island's plan to take over the country. Crazy people are genetically engineered on Plum Island as an experiment to see how well they can drive everyone around them nuts, then they are sent to Shelter Island. If the islanders can't stand Plum Crazy people, then they can be sent into Long Island and from there, they will filter into society. Stop and think of all the famous nut cases from Long Island: Mrs. Joey Buttafuco who stayed with Joey after his girlfriend shot her; or the burgler who stripped naked and got jammed in the air conditioning ducts; just to name a few... How many times have you said out loud, "Geez, where's do these people come from?" Well, now you know!

It is clearly Shelter Island's destiny to save the nation. The country, in order to maintain security really only has two options as I see it. First, hire Shelter Island to guard Plum Island. We're used to the Plum Crazy and we can patrol the waters around Plum Island with the new speedboats provided to us by the Homeland Security Administration. It will give us a chance to return all the nuts they've sent to Shelter Island.

The only other option is to saw off Plum Island under water and tow it to the Persian Gulf. Of course, in order to achieve this goal, it will be necessary to supply the island with four fifty-car capacity ferries that can double as tow boats to get Plum Island across the Atlantic. If the very wonderful Shelter Island Lions Club is allowed to organize it, it can be done in a month with a barbecue at the end!

Big Event Of The Week

Peyton Place: The Biography of a Big Book

Long before Twin Peaks and Melrose Place, there was Peyton Place, a prime-time TV show with a five-year run that featured one of the most interesting casts in television history. The show starred, among others, Ryan O'Neal and Mia Farrow, and was based on one of the most controversial novels ever written, which was nasty, notorious and, of course, lots of fun to read. A book that big had to become a movie, and so it did in 1957 starring Lee Phillips, Lana Turner and Diane Varsi.

Dr. Ardis Cameron, a professor at the University of Southern Maine (the novel is set in Camden), has researched the 1956 novel and its impact on popular culture, and she will give a talk followed by the film at Peconic Landing in Greenport this Friday, March 28, at 4 p.m. The event is free but reservations are required. Mark Your Calendar: 13th Annual Windows on L.I. Wine

It's true. Time flies. Could this really be the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Long Island wine region? In 1973, Alex and Louisa Hargrave planted the area's first vinifera vines and the rest, as they say, is history. Today, the Long Island Wine Council has nearly thirty members, comprised of vineyards, wineries and estates, and that is indeed something to celebrate.

On Monday, April 28, the beautiful Guastavino's restaurant on 59th Street will host the Council's 13th Annual Windows on Long Island Wine Coming Soon. This is a spectacular fundraising event, benefiting the Earth Pledge Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting sustainable agriculture. It is a celebration of Long Island wines from 25 Long Island wineries accompanied by culinary delights from more than 20 top Long Island and New York City restaurants.

The event attracts hundreds of philanthropic food and wine lovers from the New York metropolitan area. There will be a VIP Reception from 5-7 p.m. hosted by Tom Matthews, executive editor of the Wine Spectator, and wine guru Kevin Zraly, director of the Windows on the World Wine School. A Grand Tasting follows from 7-9 p.m. This is a very popular event, so plan early to avoid disappointment. Cost: VIP $250, Grand Tasting $125 ($150 at the door). Call 212-980-2455 for details.

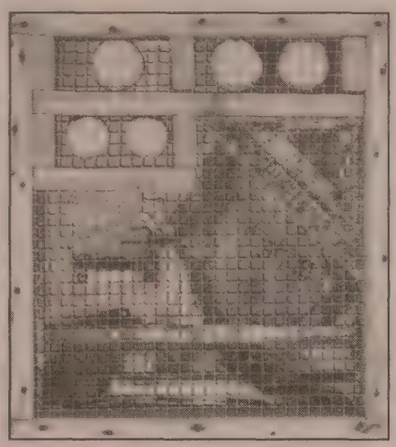
Water Mill Artist Jim Gemake Gleans The Streets From Manhattan To Montauk

By Susan Whitney Simm

Great art, as opposed to that which merely pleases, reflects the culture of its time. And the East End Arts Council's current show, "Construction, Deconstruction, Reconstruction," is an accurate reflection of today's western world where monetary wealth still matters most, and where the end results of our endless consumption burst our landfills and line our streets.



"Diagonal with Captured Spheres" by J. Gemake

But they also stir artists like Jim Gemake's imagination. Jim's assemblages (in the Council's project room), created almost entirely from found objects or "junk" (Jim's word) discarded along both Manhattan and Hampton streets, recycle society's castoffs into statements illustrating our conflicted relationship with material things.

To paraphrase an old adage, all of mankind's junk is potentially Jim's treasure. Even a plastic apple, something Jim might normally pass by, becomes a focal point for "Adam and Eve" where, in the infamous garden, you could say all human troubles, material or otherwise, began. I caught up with Jim the morning after the opening of his show at the Council.

Susan Simm: So where do you find your "junk"?

Jim Gemake: The short answer is everywhere. The city streets are a goldmine, as is Montauk Highway.

SS: How do you decide what to pick up and what to pass by?

JG: I'd like to get rid of all the litter in the streets, but let's face it, I can't pick up everything! So I look for things with personality, things that tell me they need to be picked up. Some things are large or interesting enough to become the focus of a work right away. Other things become accents, touches that enhance.

SS: What is the most important aspect of your collage work?

Harmony is really important. The work is also about change. I used to call my art the art of the lost and found. But lost connotes that someone would like it back, that perhaps they are looking for it. Now I use the word 'discarded' because it has more of a connotation of abandonment. So I look at my role now as a kind of resurrectionist. I take things that are abandoned and give them new life. I also try very hard to challenge the viewer. I'm not interested in creating retinal art – art that is only pleasing to the eye. I want to bring the viewer in.

SS: What are your favorite materials and where do you find them?

I very rarely use plastic. I don't think it has a personality like paper, rusted metal, old wood. People ask me if I go the beach to search, but I'm not into driftwood or shells. The highways are my place. Maybe this is because I grew up in the city. My work has a stronger connection to people than to nature.

Anywhere I find myself the streets are fair game. I don't catalogue where I find pieces, that really doesn't play a big role. I guess I'm an equal opportunity junk collector! But I hate clean cities. If they're really clean, they just don't do anything for me.

SS: Are your titles very significant?

Yes. Many of them have double and triple meanings. I also like to introduce an element of whimsy, as in "Workman's Compensation" (in which an empty, flattened tin of Russian caviar is gripped by the fingers of an old leather glove). I found that glove exactly as it appears in the piece.

SS: Are you influenced at all by the Surrealists?

More by the Dada school. I was influenced in "Search for Vladimir Tatlin" by the eponymous Russian avant-garde artist who started a school of Constructivism in 1917. He turned out to be very influential to this day.

SS: How does symbolism enter your work?

I really like to use mirrors and arrows. And the use of the diagonal is also very important to me, as illustrated by "Blue Arc" and "Measure Twice, Cut Once," a tribute to my father. His second love was carpentry, and I think that if he wasn't in the textile business he could have been a carpenter. In the piece you see his saw, a piece of sandpaper he used, his carpenter's pencil.

SS: What is the biggest challenge you regularly face in your work?

JG: That it's work. Real work! It's not that I'm so gifted. People pick up a book and think that the author just sat down and wrote it in three hours and that was that. Creation is work. Ideas beget ideas. If I'm away for a while, I have to push myself to get started again.

"A Russian Reconstruction" by J. Gemake

SS: Kind of like writer's block?

JG: Yes. Exactly.

SS: I never thought that we writers were the only ones who suffered from that...

JG: You're not. You guys may have invented the phrase, but you certainly don't have a monopoly on it!

Jim is currently part of the Guild Hall members' show in East Hampton, as well as a group show at the Avram Gallery at Southampton College, the opening reception for which is planned for April 3 from 5-7 p.m. This show at the East End Arts Council, located at 133 East Main Street in Riverhead, runs through April 12. Open 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, 727-0900.

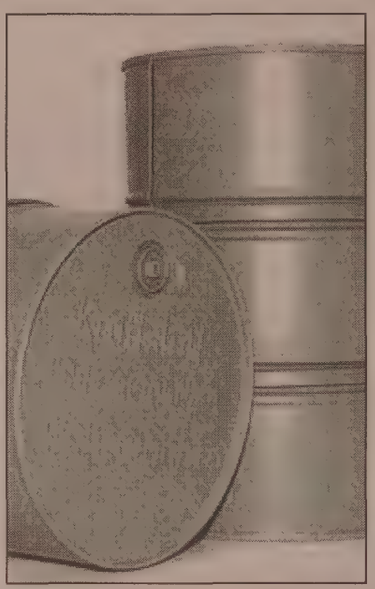
Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

What Are We Up To?

I used to be a little confused as to why we are going into Iraq. I just honestly did not understand it. Everyone else in the country seemed to understand it, so I decided that I would talk to a couple of different people around my college campus in Boston.

First though, I went for a walk down the street to go to Ben and Jerry's and get myself some ice cream to think everything over. The guy who served me at the counter had a nametag that said Sam. After ordering a cone of Cherry Garcia I said, "Excuse me, Sam right?"



"Actually no, it's Mike. I'm borrowing this from a girl that works here." I decided not to pursue this. "Oh, sorry Mike. I was just wondering what your thoughts were on us going to war with Iraq?"

Without hesitating Mike responded as if he had heard this question every day. "You want to know something man? I'm so glad that we are in there kicking some ass. I mean it is about time. I'm surprised that we didn't go into Iraq the day after 9/11."

I got my ice cream and paid, a little disappointed. I knew that the terrorists during 9/11 were not from Iraq and had nothing to do with Saddam Hussein.

I walked out of the store and headed back to campus. On the way back, I decided to randomly ask somebody on the street what they thought about us invading Iraq. I went up to a young college guy who was walking out of a store with who appeared to be his girlfriend. "Excuse me. Sorry to bother you, I was just wondering if you were for or against this whole war thing in Iraq." Again an immediate response as if he were ready for the question. "I am so glad that we are going into Iraq, man. I mean Saddam lied about all of the weapons that he has. You know that he is secretly building a nuclear bomb or something. We can't forget that he used all those chemical weapons on those poor Turks. That guy is just messed up. He will probably build a nuclear bomb and sell it to bin Laden. You know that guy would sell it, he loves money. What if he sold it to Osama and then brought it here? What if he fired a missile with some Anthrax in it at us? I'm not willing to take that risk." He then walked off.

I stood there and thought about what he said. Was he really right? Saddam has said that he does not have any weapons of mass destruction and we went in with inspectors and found none. We did find a couple of missiles, but they were short range. They would not even be able to reach outside of the Middle East. There is no evidence that gives us reason to believe that he is building a nuclear weapon. He did use chemical weapons against the Kurds, not the Turks, in 1991. This was certainly a horrible act. However, the United States gave him those weapons when we were fighting with him against Iran and it is not like he is the only country who has them. North Korea has a sophisticated nuclear weapons program.

Shop 'til You Drop....With Maria Tennariello

Well, here it is almost spring almost... the towns and shops were buzzing this week with shoppers and even tourists. Let's do some spring shopping!

If you're in Hampton Bays, check out the Hampton Nursery & Landscapes on W. Montauk Highway. Hampton Nursery & Landscapes is launching a colorful season with a "Spring Sale" on board and tall forsythias (one of my very favorites). Be sure to pick up your lawn and garden food while you are there and do talk to them about your dram landscape projects. If you're a senior, you will receive their 1-% discounts every Monday. There are three plus acres here, so get spruced up for spring without any hassles. You can also place your orders by phone on their many offerings such as plantings, topsoil, mulch, compost and peat moss. Get going the early bird always catches the worm...

This is definitely the last weekend at The John Rogers "Giant Warehouse Winter Clearance Sale." All items are well below wholesale costs at the Mariner Drive location. Be there!

If you want something different in furnishings and accessories, Casual Home has casual, classic and comfortable home furnishings and accessories. Located on County Road 39, Southampton there is so much to choose from in sofas, beds, tables, chairs, counter and bar stools, entertainment centers, cupboards, benches, and much more. Open every day, stop in and say hi. Bet you won't leave without buying something.

Right next door at Windows & Walls Unlimited there is a hefty 65% off Hunter Douglass window fashions gallery. Linda and Paul do a great job and are very happy to assist you in every way.

Hot off the press: the Siena Spirituality Center at Villa Maria in Water Mill has plans to revive its SpringTime Luncheon and Fashion Show. "Spring Fever" that be presented on Saturday, May 3, at 12:30 p.m., $75 per ticket includes a delectable luncheon, stylish spring fashions by mark, Fore and Strike as well as charming clothing form children by Punch of East Hampton. So, mark your calendar and give a call for information and tickets at 631-726-4740.

Bridgehampton Common's Verizon Wireless is sharing the minutes while you share the savings. Two lines for just $59.99 is the newest deal they have. Stop in and check this one out...

Sag Harbor's Unlimited Earth Care is celebrating their tenth anniversary...(My how time does fly)! Here they do it all, landscapes, installation, maintenance, lawn care, transplanting, floral gardens, hedge care, organic products, pruning and much more. Give a call at 725-7551.

Balasses House Antiques of Amagansett, located at the corner of Hedges and Main Street, has a delightful collection of unusual clocks of all shapes, sizes and in a variety of woods, such as mahogany and maple. They include mantle, table and wall clocks, some are French, some English or American, and most date from the 19th century. Prices range from under $300 to over $500.

Time to run and get Tino ready for a groom at the Shinnecock Animal Hospital on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays. He loves; loves to go there and get all spruced up after a long dreary winter. His do, just don't right now and Donna will make him handsome, as usual...Call 723-0500 for grooming and vet services.

If you know of any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330.

Classic Cars with Bob Gelber

BOAT

John Paul Jones said, "Give me a fast ship, because I plan to go in harm's way." Of course in his era, a fast boat was one that was capable of attaining a maximum speed of perhaps thirteen miles per hour. It has been said of sailboats, then and now, that man has never invented a more expensive way of going slow.

Generally speaking, boats have always been slow transportation devices. Even though it's a colorful sounding name, I've often wondered why General Motors named its most high performance and fastest car after a boat. A Corvette is a small navy ship that can barely sustain a speed of thirty miles per hour. So all you hot shot C6 Chevy Corvette owners out there are really driving a slow boat – to China?

The analogy between a boat and a car has been made for many years. Remember the 40's Packard Clipper? That was certainly aptly named, because it surely handled like a big, old boat. Cars with unusually soft, ill-handling suspensions, and worn shock absorbers, are said to "float all over the highway." Most large American cars of the 50's and 60's handled roads in boat-like fashion.

When you went over a bump in a '59 Oldsmobile, the car would usually gently gyrate with what was called "thank you Ma'ams," literally bowing up and down on its softly sprung suspension. Go over a bump while taking a hard corner at speed, aided by the primitive bias ply tires of the period, and all hell would break loose.

There was a simple solution to this not so perplexing problem common to big American cars of the 50's: don't go fast around corners.

The racing stock cars of the period were usually lowered and had stiffer springs. The race winning Hudsons were even produced with what their advertising touted as "step down design," meaning that the floor of the stock car was lowered to give it a better center of gravity.

One of the reasons for the success of the first British sports cars imported into the states after World War Two is that compared to the sloppy handling of the American cars, they were a revelation to drive. They were lightweight, maneuverable little vehicles that could literally run circles around big sedans. They were called sports cars because you really had to be a sport to drive them. They were flimsily built, leaked like old rowboats, had terrible heaters, and if truth be told, never ran as well, or had as long a life as any American built car.

They were not boats; they were birds, T- Birds. They were Jaguars, Alfas and Porsches. Their biggest claim to fame is that they were actually fun to drive, and to steal marketing jargon that refers to today's SUV popularity, sports cars made a statement about one's lifestyle.

Big sedans were for the old, station wagons were for the family, but the impractical little leaky sports car was for the adventurous. During the '50s, owning a sports car was considered chic. Even at $1,800, MG-TC was special. Forget a Jaguar XK-120. You were king of the highway in this car. The average person spotted Ferraris only in magazines and occasionally glimpsed bathtub shaped Porsches only in Connecticut.

For some reason, Mercedes-Benz 300SL gullwings abounded in Westhampton. It was a strange phenomenon, because Westhampton also had an overabundance of Cadillacs. Unusual automotive bedfellows.

Returning to my boat analogies, John Paul Jones would love the new Porsche SUV, because it certainly is a fast cruiser. I just heard that it will do 170 miles per hour. This is just the kind of performance we all need here in America, especially useful in New York City traffic and when cruising on the open high speed tarmac of the Long Island Expressway. Just think, utilizing that speed, one could get to the Hamptons in half an hour!

Anyway, Porsche along with everyone else, has become a "boat" builder. Conversely, I have heard that Hatteras will soon be producing a rear-engined sports car. Will the idea float?

I've got a great concept for a new vehicle. An amphibious SUV. It will bring new meaning to sport utility. They are already as big as some nineteen-foot runabouts, and, with few exceptions, they seem to float, and do occasionally roll over. Detroit should finish what they have created, and make them true boats, able to cruise land and sea. If John Paul Jones were alive today, he would probably comment on all this SUV craziness with one well chosen word. Frigate.

I also thought about how if Saddam still has those weapons, why has he not used them on us yet? He hates us, for crying out loud! If you hate somebody you try to hurt them. I think if Saddam had the capability he would have used it long ago. Especially since we are bombing the crap out of him. It is not like he doesn't have a reason to attack us.

Selling a weapon of mass destruction to Osama bin Laden does not make any sense either. For one, Osama Bin Laden is probably in hiding deep inside a cave. Two, Osama bin Laden hates Saddam Hussein. Bin Laden made a video tape which was broadcast around the globe. He said in the tape that the first country he hates is the U.S. and the second country that he hates is Iraq. Saddam is a sell out in bin Laden's eyes.

I walked away still confused.

I decided that I would go talk to one of the smartest guys I know in Boston. He is my finance professor. I walked into his office a little tired and thirsty because ice cream always makes me thirsty. He looked at me.

"Hey Dave, what can I do for you?"

"Why do you think we are going into Iraq?"

My professor gave me a hard look and thought for a moment. "Dave, one thing that we learn in finance is how to calculate risk. We also learn to analyze things. This basically means that we try to understand why people do certain things," he said. "Iraq is a perfect example of how we can apply these two lessons. Let's start with calculating risk. When comparing the risk of Saddam Hussein ordering and funding a terrorist attack on the U.S. with, let's say you driving your car down the street. Which one is more risky?" I looked at him and smiled, "Probably driving my car."

My professor replied, "50,000 people die each year in car accidents. To put that in perspective, about 70,000 soldiers died during the Vietnam War. I don't think Saddam Hussein can even throw a rock at the United States. Now what is more risky to our security? A country who has no documented nuclear weapons and a small army, or a country with many reported nuclear weapons and a large army?"

I knew what he was getting at. "Then why are we not doing anything about North Korea? We are being so hypocritical."

My professor then said, "Well let's look at why we are doing things. People tend to do things if they are profitable, especially the United States. Iraq is the second largest oil producing country in the entire world. Our economy is in the gutter."

My professor turned his head down to his desk and said, "I really have to take care of things for final grades. I am glad we talked though."

I stepped out of his office. We are going in there to take all of their oil? That is the sleaziest thing I have ever heard. The economy will start doing better, and President Bush will come out looking like a hero.

Is that correct?

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"SOME OF MY FAVORITE THINGS" AT GLENN HOROWITZ

While the title, "Some of My Favorite Things," currently at Glenn Horowitz Bookseller in East Hampton refers to curator Graham Leader's personal selections, the show's quality addresses universal appeal no matter whose "Favorite Things" they may be. Nonetheless, we can't help but characterize Mr. Leader's penchant for line as a prevailing aesthetic.

Artists know that line can give direction, location and character to an image. as it can also possess color, value and texture. More particularly, however, in this show it is line that reveals a form's structure and detail. The meaning of such structures/details may be literal/realistic or abstract/philosophical.

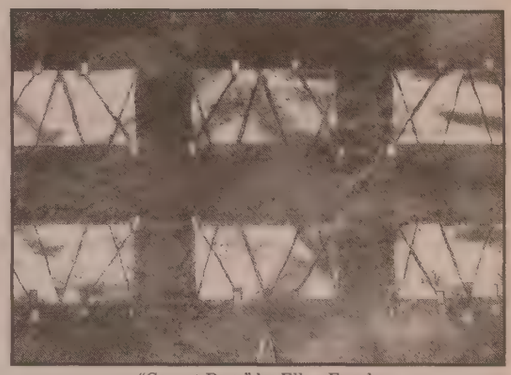
For example, Ibram Lassaw's black and white drawing is a literal, organic, signature shape representing the universe through the juxtaposition of lines. On the other hand, William Burroughs' work is not a linear horizontal/vertical one, but more abstract, his swirling mass signifying perhaps the artist's personal vision of a philosophical state. (Then again, maybe not.)

Rockwell Kent's seascape combines both vertical lines and mass shapes to expose the contradictory dynamics at work in nature. Jonathan Morse's turtle also regards lines in nature, the former piece seemingly less realistic than Mr. Morse's. Even so, the turtle, in all its objectivity, appears almost surreal.

Speaking of nature, Ellen Frank's fossil-like flower rising like a phoenix from the cosmos (or the ground) uses a primitive (or is it a primordial) line, the stem exposed in all its glory. Ms. Frank's "Carpet Page" series conveys lines differently but just as revealing as we literally catch peeks of another world.

Louise Belcourt's works are more down-to-earth and the most humorous, where line divides space and where a wandering, pervasive red line becoming a phallax symbol.

What's also interesting as a subtext are the books on display around the downstairs reception desk.



"Carpet Page" by Ellen Frank

While these works are not part of the exhibit, their covers convey graphic art quite effectively where line rules. We especially enjoyed the "film noir"-like covers including one by James Elroy.

The show at Glenn Horowitz Bookseller will be on view until April 14.

Honoring the Artist: Brenda Zlamany

Artist Brenda Zlamany is not one to hide her head in the sand. She appears to be an intelligent, caring person who knows all too well the realities of life, especially these unpredictable and tenuous times. Even so, her favorite subjects have been and continue to be innocent children and the even more innocent past. Perhaps that's why Ms. Zlamany's cover this week seems particularly welcoming: a reminder of the things that give us nourishment and hope for the future.

The cover is a signature piece, a portrait of Alva at age eight, the daughter of Ms. Zlamany's dealer. The girl is dressed in a party dress, recalling not only a young child's favorite clothing but marking a time and place when there is only joy and peace in the world.

Ms. Zlamany suggests another reason for her attraction to this kind of subject matter: "I used to paint bald men; I wasn't into hair for the first five years of my painting. I went from bald men to babies," she says with a mixture of respect and humor. She quickly adds, however, that her very favorite subject is her own daughter, Oona.

But Ms. Zlamany does more than merely convey an image/setting based on her favorite subjects. She is also drawn to the way objects produce a greater context. "I love to paint the children with their toys, the mystery around these toys. I start to create and explore a story about these things," she says with apparent gusto.

It's apparent that Ms. Zlamany explores other subjects as well, with the same sensitivity and storytelling: landscapes. "In the early 1990s, I went to Vietnam," she explains. "I went alone; I wanted to prove I could do it." Ms. Zlamany not only proved she could go it alone (despite some scary moments in Cambodia), but she was also able to guide her art in another direction.

"Even though I can relate to portraits, it was a relief to get away from them. Landscape is more abstract; it's very liberating to create them," she says.

But why Vietnam for landscape? "My parents always talked about it during the 1960s," Ms. Zlamany responds quickly. "I also liked the idea that Vietnam had patterned landscape." (Another factor, no doubt, is the fact that she speaks French.)

We get the impression that Ms. Zlamany was no tourist during her three months in Vietnam when she notes that she would go all over the country, hiring a driver/guide to take her into the mountains.

Ms. Zlamany's non-tourist travels have taken her to Africa as well, and although she has created a lot of material, like watercolors and photographs, she has yet to do a series on the country. "I'm into my people phase now," she reminds us. "The faces of children can show the whole weight of the world or incredible joy."

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

The Hunted

In the mad, mad world of war movies and, actual, honest-to-God wars, where people really die, the truth is made hazy, clouded by the explosive conflagrations. Reason and honesty are twisted surrealistically and, Godliness is invoked as a partner in the violence. The Hunted, like Tears of the Sun, attempts anti-war intent and, pseudo-topicality, but when the smoke clears, you can see the sham of special ops directed for box office gains. Real wars have bigger budgets, so the puppet theater scenarios are not as apparent. The Hunted splurges its budget on a 1999 Kosovo massacre infiltrated by an undercover, covert, scream-machine, U.S. search-and-destroy team headed by super destroyer Benicio Del Toro. Their mission: to kill an evildoer, a Serbian officer. Del Toro is tough as a hand grenade but the bloodshed of this incident will haunt him for years, especially the face of a little girl holding a cuddly doll in the midst of the carnage. Yes, the movie is that numb-dumb obvious.

A sermon-intended reading of lines by Johnny Cash's deep, deep voicing, "Oh, God said to Abraham, 'Kill me a son,'" opens the film. The lyrics are from "Highway 61 Revisited." However, Del Toro, plays Aaron, get it? He eventually hits the high road to the Pacific Northwest to keep killing. He is so well trained, he just can't stop, and there are those memories – that little girl's face! Aaron decides to hunt hunters and begins thinning the herds of them up in those woods. Then there's another woodland warrior, Tommy Lee Jones, in his grizzly bear guise, up thar' in the Northwest preserving wildlife and therefore, trying to keep from throttling hunters for malpractice. He comes close to doing that because he taught Aaron everything he knows about killin'. Well, you can guess, the FBI realizes he's the only one who can match the deadly hunter and bring him in. The chase is on!

Tommy Lee and Benny are at it, one on one. The hunter hunted. There are plenty of spills and chills that take your breath, if you want your breath taken. These two actors deserve better than this slice of boys being boys at war games. I say "slice" because knives are the weapons of choice – sort of like Boy Scouts earning merit badges toward stealth killing machines. This in a movie that has Biblical references, more father-son stuff and the FBI firing volleys into standers-by. I don't mean to slam the Boy Scouts of America, but maybe their concerns should be other than lame-brain, homophobia. The Hunted stalks masculinity the way Tommy Lee doggedly pursues fugitives – in both cases they bark up the wrong tree.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Bend It Like Beckham (+)

Movie Review: "Bend It Like Beckham" (+)

This is a good, old-fashioned soap opera that achieves its goal. Audiences will identify with and admire the characters, and right conquers wrong resulting in a happy ending.

The primary attraction of the movie is the ability of a young Hindu girl, Jess (Parminder K. Nagra), to overcome her family's prejudice against her playing soccer. Jess lives in a London suburb with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Bhamra (Anupam Kher and Shaheen Khan) and her engaged sister Pinky (Archie Panjabi). Her traditional Indian parents object to her playing soccer, wanting her to be reared as a proper Hindu girl preparing for marriage. Pinky is upset that Jess is jeopardizing her relationship with her future in laws.

The title of the film comes from the name of the British soccer star, David Beckham, whose enormous photo hangs in Jesse's bedroom. The film contains intimations of lesbianism (fake) and homosexuality (true). Jess and her best friend and fellow soccer player Juliette (Keira Knightley) vie for the affections of their coach Joe (Jonathan Rhys-Meyers) who looks like a young and benign Malcolm McDowell. Remember him in "A Clockwork Orange?" The film also contains the traditional Indian wedding celebration that we have grown accustomed to similar to the one in "Monsoon Wedding."

All in all, it is a romp with occasional tears, lots of good humor, and good but not great acting. It was clear from the beginning that all would turn out okay. Your neurons won't be exercised during the show, and it isn't half the picture that "Billy Elliot" was; nevertheless, it is a go.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the Mayor of New York.

The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival – Spring 2003

CITY BY THE SEA

Saturday, March 29, at 2 p.m. Southampton College again hosts the long running Dan's Papers Film Festival of "Movies Made Here," an acknowledgement of Long Island's active place in filmmaking. Long Beach is the location for this season's first presentation. It stars Robert De Niro, a Long Island guy whose dad was a fine fine artist with his studio in Montauk. This powerful film was released this past year and it is an auspicious opening production. Admission is free and refreshments are served with a lively discussion. I am your host, Guy de Fraumeni and with Sarah Halsey, I look forward to seeing you at Duke Hall in the Chancellor's building off the main parking lot at the College.

City By The Sea. Heaven and Hell. The distance between the two is shorter than we think. For sentimental saps like me, the natural East End, here is Heaven – as heavenly as an overfully equipped recreation room, replete with every consoling device wanted, including an air purifier that blows the cobwebs from our lungs, head and mind. Not far away is Manhattan's West End, Hell's Kitchen. It cooks to the boiling point. As depicted in City By The Sea, the town of Long Beach, here on Long Island, like ours, was a seaside recreation area but it quickly slid into an ocean of misery. If the broiling West Side is Hell's Kitchen, then this movie would have you shocked to know that Long Beach became Hell's Toilet – a befouled receptacle for the excrement of hopelessness.

City By The Sea stars the best inner acting of Robert De Niro as a N.Y.P.D. detective who left Long Beach years ago, abandoning his wife, Patti Lupone and very young son. De Niro's cop is going to pot, living in detachment in downtown, pre-9-11, NY except for on and off romancing his neighbor, Frances McDormand. Director, Michael Caton-Jones, is as relaxed as De Niro's stomach muscles with the film's start, however, everyone's abs tighten up when his now grown son, a junkie, in great performance by James Franco, is wanted for murder. Ugly incidents and revelations erupt in corrosively cruddy Long Beach. De Niro says, "It looks like the Serbian Army's been here." Cracking to the surface is De Niro's reticence. He had buried his own youth here. Other grinding themes gnarl the plot, seemingly ludicrous and unfortunately, they're mostly talked and talked about. But the story from a 1997 Esquire article, is a true account of Vincent La Marca who, at the premiere party, thought the film took some liberties, but how could he possibly ask for better. I could, however – the movie clutches and holds, even at it's lowest ebb.

Considering the lowest ebb of Long Beach that, not so long was a beach paradise, this morality tale includes that tragedy as well. Our culture is a flighty one. We can enjoy a Heaven and, without a thought, let it go to Hell.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS
THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

2 PM Saturday, March 29 – CITY BY THE SEA – Long Beach co-stars with Robert DeNiro and Francis McDormand in a powerful drama of a dedicated detective whose son is wanted for murder. James Franco's performance as the son is as powerful as this riveting tale.

2 PM Saturday, April 26 – GARBO TALKS – Sidney Lumet directs other Hamptonites in a charming and poignant story. A dutiful son, Ron Silver goes about fulfilling his mother's wish to meet Greta Garbo. Ann Bancroft, as the tough mom, is a trip. The meeting in the closing scene features the fab Betty Comden, as Garbo. Darn, we gave away the ending.

2 PM Saturday, May 3 – A SHOCK TO THE SYSTEM – Michael Caine stars, yet again, in "Movies Made Here"; as in so many others he's a bit naughty. Here he realizes how easy it is to get ahead in the ad business...kill off people in your way. A shady dark comedy of the greedy 80's and 90's, it puts Elizabeth McGovern and Swoosie Kurtz in harm's way with giggles.

2 PM Saturday, May 10 – THE WOODY ALLEN PROJECT – A musical jaunt in Europe and back home to visit his mom and dad here on the Island. Pop thought Wood should have been a druggist. His wife, Soon Yi, has to put up with Woody's kvetching on tour and thinks maybe daddy knew best. The music put out by Woody's band is so toe-tapping happy, you'd never know he's such a sourpuss.

Spring Bride

Designer Wedding Gowns For Spring 2003

Long Island weddings will be happening all spring and summer out on the East End this year. While it should follow that with so many weddings by the sea, there would be as many wedding boutiques, the fact of the matter is that there's not one bridal shop in the Hamptons (at least not one that I could find). The best bridal shopping is further west on Long Island or in the big bad city. Whether you want high-end couture for your gala event or a great bargain on your beach-wedding gown, you'll find it in Manhattan. The Spring 2003 styles are elegant and classic with plenty of options.

The runways boasted variations on the spring trend of elegant retro-modern gowns this year, with everything from taffeta, satin, and tulle, to leather and suede, to down-to-earth cotton. Most prevalent are flowers, which are either embroidered onto sheer fabric, beaded onto the gown, or worn as a single opulent silk bloom on a simple dress. Vera Wang, whom everyone knows is the wedding dress designer to beat all others, has several dresses this season with flowers delicately etched into the fabric in one form or another. Vera Wang went with the retro-modern look as well. Her dresses are reminiscent of the 50's and 60's, but with a thoroughly modern twist: strappy heels that wrap around the ankle, a traditional-looking dress with long sheer sleeves is cropped surprisingly short – above the knee. The innovative look comes off as chic and sophisticated. Her bridesmaid's dresses are equally as beautiful and graceful, if a bit toned-down so as not to upstage the bride. If you're not up for this season's prices, you can usually find bargains on less au courant Vera Wang gowns and bridesmaids' dresses at department stores, bridal boutiques, or even on the web.

Badgley Mischka's designs are another gorgeous option. This year, they moved down the runway in tafetta, organza, satin, beading, and Chantilly lace. Lace is a good alternative for the sex appeal of a revealing dress without the baring of skin – it's a subtle way to get the same effect. Badgley Mischka's strapless dresses are particularly stunning, especially the "Zoe," which is a candlelight-colored satin, a softer option than bridal-white. The "Danica" is a scoop-necked gown with a white sequined midriff. Even sequins and beading are carried off well, though; they are more charming than flashy. The classic strapless dress with a fitted top and full skirt is popular this year, especially since the taffeta is lighter and easier to wear than it was in days past.

Carolina Herrera and Oscar de la Renta also went the retro-modern route, with gorgeous, traditional dresses made modern with the flower appliqués, a new twist on the cut of the skirt (more flared than tapered, or with flowered embroidery or beading), or different types of fabric. Also popular in these collections are slip dresses and off-the-shoulder gowns, which are elegant options to the popular strapless wedding dress.

While the East End doesn't have any of its own wedding boutiques, there are places to shop for bridesmaids' dresses if you're willing to get a little creative. Cashmere Hampton in East Hampton says that their silk satin ballskirt is often used in weddings, paired with a twinset from their shop or a boustier from Bonne Nuit, which is just down the street. The ballskirt-and-top also works well for any body type and can be used again for other occasions. Much of the eveningwear sold in the Hamptons could work as bridesmaid's dresses for more casual weddings or less-structured events where matching isn't crucial.

The wedding dress itself is most readily available up island. Both Bridal Reflections in Massapequa and the Bridal Suite of Patchogue carry many of the big-name designers. If you're in the city, Vera Wang has a bridal boutique and a maids boutiqe, both on Madison Avenue. And the department stores, like Saks, also have their own bridal boutiques. Saks carries all the big designers, Carolina Herera and Badgley Mischka included. If you're hunting for a bargain, your best bet is one of the other department stores, a smaller boutique, or looking online once you've found a style you like. This season's designs have so much romance and elegance, it won't be hard to find a stellar gown and beautiful bridesmaids dresses.

Spring Bride

Solving The Catering Conundrum

Congratulations, you are getting married! You finally found the right person to begin your life together, and now you want to celebrate your union in front of friends and family in the perfect setting! Where to begin? As Bette Davis said in All about Eve, "Buckle your seat belts its going to be a bumpy night!" In reality, it really doesn't have to be bumpy at all! As a caterer and event planner, I offer this suggestion: Take a deep breath... You can do it! You just need some guidance.

It can be overwhelming to implement the biggest and most costly event you will ever plan, but with the right attitude, organization and hiring the venders that do their job well, you can sail through this time brilliantly!

First and foremost, do not lose sight of the fact that this is a celebration! Where it gets complicated is that there are your opinions, his opinions, and the parents opinions. This can be unsettling, unless the art of communicating and compromising is one of your strongest suits. Remember to always act as a team, supporting each other, being considerate of each person's input, and weighing the options to put together this party successfully.

In this regard, the most important vender you should hire is a full service caterer that has an event planner on staff to orchestrate and suggest the details that you will need for the big picture. This person is a valuable player on the team, settling any disputes if they occur, and especially to use their expertise and experience to lay out all of the proper steps to execute this wedding beautifully. They will direct you to hire all of the sources that will reflect your good taste. Invitations, musicians, florists and locations and cuisine. When meeting with these venders, remember you are in control, and have been equipped with the right questions to ask. Feeling comfortable and not being intimidated, and feeling that they are listening to your requests and concerns, and feeling confident that they will indeed do the best job for you is the reason you have selected them.

The most important thing when you are getting started is to decide on the season you want to get married in and where? How many on the guest list? Where should you make hotel accommodations for out of towners? (A good caterer can assemble welcome baskets to make a grand first impression when they arrive to show that you appreciate their journey to be in attendance.)

Where to get married begins with the way you wish to express your individual tastes. A clambake on the beach, under the stars at your family's home, in a lavish tent, a rooftop barbecue overlooking the Manhattan skyline in Autumn, dining al fresco in a vineyard, or designing a winter wonderland in a elegant mansion -- all of these options need to be narrowed down to just one so you can begin.

According to your budget and the venue's availability a date has to be chosen. Then the caterer can compose a menu that will compliment the setting and respecting the foods that you would like to have represented on the menu. By offering a coupling of entrees at a sit down dinner or a choice of three selections at a buffet, can make it easier to entertain so many guests likes and dislikes. Seasonal, current, innovative and fresh fare is always the reputation of an excellent caterer. A few weeks before the date, a tasting should be scheduled, with a waiter present serving the actual cuisine and presentation that you should expect to have on your wedding day.

Specific questions to ask the caterer are:

1. Will there be a maitre d' on hand that evening to coordinate and attend to all details?
2. Can the caterer order all the rentals if it is an off site location?
3. Is the wedding cake included? What kind of cake styles are offered?
4. What is the charge for the band or photographer to eat?
5. Can special meals be accommodated for some guests dietary restrictions?
6. How many on staff? If it is casual, ask for casual attire specifically for the staff.
7. Can you bring in your own venders if you choose to do so?
8. What is the policy for payment?
9. How long is the party? Is there a place for a wedding ceremony? What is the overtime fee?
10. Good references are always important from past clients; a list should be provided.

These are some of the questions that will arise when you are in discussion. Again, feeling confident that all is falling into place, you can breathe a sigh of relief, and get on with the pleasure of being the recipients of all the good wishes and events that will take place during your engagement!

Getting married is a wonderful time of your life, enjoy the experience, and most importantly: Have a Happily Ever After!

Newlyweds Brenda Lynn and Vincent Giandurco rhapsodized over their East Hampton wedding reception at Mary Jane's Restaurant.

"My family had been dining here for many years," Vincent recalled, "And the idea of having our reception at Mary Jane's just seemed to fit the type of informal yet elegant country wedding we wanted."

"It was perfect," Brenda agreed, noting that "Mary Jane and her staff, including her brilliant chef, Ken, were just so accomodating and friendly. Many of our guests went out of their way to commend the staff for their helpful and kind attentiveness. And the place looked so beautiful, and so romantic," the fashion designer added.

"And, oh yes, we danced. A lot," Vincent said. The public relations executive noted that "The planning was flawless, the food was superb, and we have had at least a dozen friends tell us it was the best wedding of any kind - country, city, destination - that they have ever attended."

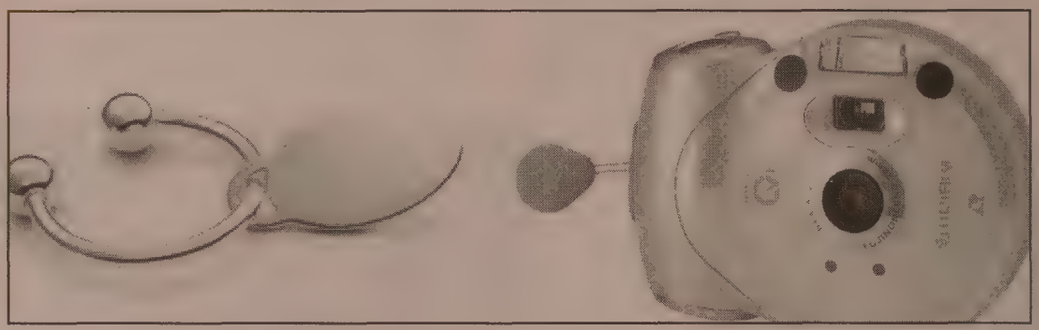
10 Great Gift Bags



Wedding favors are a tricky business. You want something original, from the heart without being over-the-top. Gifts vary depending on the style of the wedding. Pretty much anything goes, from simple pictures, poems, or chotchkes, to more elaborate favors on decked-out rose-covered tables. Following are a few ideas to show your guests you appreciate their presence:

1. Engraved silver key rings. The ones from Tiffany's are especially lovely.

2. A beach wedding calls for beach favors: Sunglasses and sunscreen make a nice little gift. Or a beach towel and sunscreen would be a less expensive choice. Colorful flip-flops or a frisbee work well, too.

3. The Italian tradition: sachets of glazed almonds ("confetti" is Italian for almond). They are considered good luck.

4. Tiny bud vases with fresh flowers make for a pretty give-away display on the tables.

5. A champagne flute or wine glass embossed with your names and the date of the wedding.

6. For the very-budget-conscious: a simple poem is gift enough.

7. Bubbles for the kids (or for everyone), small packs of crayons and colored paper.

8. If either of you is creative, a personalized favor means more than something store-bought: a few hand-painted notecards tied together with ribbon for each person, matted or framed photos of you and the friends, homemade tins of chocolates or cookies.

9. CD's are easy and cheap. Songs from the wedding, favorite songs of yours and your friends', and to top it off, a picture of the couple on the front.

10. Disposable Cameras. Or, the very-cute Nexia Q1 from Fuji, a tiny APS camera (about $40 from KMart). Or, slightly pricier: the Kodak EasyShare Digital Camera (about $75 from Target).

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The invitation read A Birthday Surprise to be held at ICE, the Institute of Culinary Education. What fun I thought, immediately recognizing that it would be a cooking class birthday party at this professional cooking school in Manhattan.

Twelve of us gathered to await the birthday girl, escorted by her husband, who was truly surprised and delighted that "Il Gruppo" would be cooking together as we had in Florence, Italy, some years ago. After rounds of savory hors d'ouevres and selected wines we were ushered into a large, bright professional kitchen gleaming with steel counters laden with all manner of ingredients and equipment. We broke up into groups to the designated work areas to prepare fresh pappardelle pasta with mushroom ragout, red snapper baked 'In Cartoccio' with black olives, capers and oranges and braised artichoke hearts, endive pear and pine nut salad with gorgonzola and individual strawberry shortcakes.

We chopped and diced and sliced big beefy shitake and chanterelle mushrooms for a rich ragout, enclosed firm fish fillets in heart shaped parchment paper with delicious accompaniments, whisked a delectable vinaigrette for an exquisite salad and sifted dry ingredients to pea-size bits of butter for the toothsome shortcakes.

We laughed and learned and toasted, read poems to our celebrant and dined so well this memorable evening. And I must admit that it was great to be on the student side of the work counter. Food is an expression of love; you're always sharing with the other.

RED SNAPPER OR SALMON CARPACCIO WITH OLIVES, CAPERS AND ORANGES
Serves 6

6 squares of parchment paper or aluminum foil, folded in half
6 filets red snapper or salmon with skin on, about 6 ounces each
6 cloves garlic, crushed
Juice of lemon
6 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 cup pitted black olives, chopped
1/2 cup capers
1 orange peeled and cut into segments
Black pepper
6 fresh bay leaves

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

1. Place the heart-shaped parchment or foil on a work surface. Brush with olive oil and lay the filets at the crease of the fold.

2. In a small bowl mix together the garlic, lemon juice and olive oil. Stir to mix and drizzle over the fish. Sprinkle each filet with the olives, capers and orange segments. Dust with black pepper and top each filet with a fresh bay leaf.

3. Crimp each packet closed, and if time allows marinate in the refrigerator for thirty minutes.

4. Lay the packets on a baking sheet and bake for 8-10 minutes. Serve hot straight from the packets. Be sure to keep all the juices with the fish.

ENDIVE, PEAR AND PINE NUT SALAD WITH GORGONZOLA VINAIGRETTE
Be sure to cut the endive as close to serving time as possible or it will turn brown
Serves 6

For the vinaigrette
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil

For the salad
1/2 cup pine nuts
2 ripe red pears, cored and thinly sliced
1 lemon
6 heads Belgian endive, halved lengthwise, cored and thinly sliced
1/4 pound Gorgonzola, rind removed and cubed
1 bunch chives

1. Whisk the mustard, vinegar, salt and pepper together in a medium bowl. Very slowly whisk in the olive oil in a thin steady stream, until it is incorporated: which will emulsify after a few minutes. Set aside and whisk before using.

2. Preheat oven to 425. Spread pine nuts in a small ovenproof pan and toast them in the preheated oven until golden and aromatic, about 5 minutes.

3. Sprinkle the pears with the lemon juice and set aside for up to forty-five minutes.

4. Toss the endive with the vinaigrette in a large bowl. Divide among six plates and top with the cubed Gorgonzola, the pear slices arranged in a fan shape and the toasted pine nuts. Serve at once sprinkled with chives.

Chevy Chase will be the auctioneer at Five Points Restaurant in Manhattan on Monday, March 31, while Lizz Salaway, Roy Scheider and Barry Sonnenfeld play maitre d'. Chefs such as Bobby Flay, Larry Forgione, Marc Meyer, Jonathan Waxman and Alfred Portale will also collaborate in an effort to raise money in memory of Nick & Toni's owner Jeff Salaway. The $1000 a plate dinner will benefit The Hayground School in Bridgehampton, which Salaway and his wife, Toni Ross helped found back in 1996. Meanwhile chefs with local roots are involved too: Joe Realmuto from Nick & Toni's, Paul Del Favero from The Maidstone Arms, Riccardo Traslavina from American Bistro, John DeLucie of the SoHo/Tribeca Grand Hotels and Gail Arnold will also be creating in the kitchen that night. We hear it's sold out. But ya never know. Give the Hayground School a call at 537-7068.

Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards are each releasing new wines for the upcoming summer season. Bedell has announced the release of their 1999 C-Block South Merlot. Their first ever vineyard designated wine, the C-Block South Merlot was harvested from a small two-acre plot. Reportedly redolent of black cherry and warm plum with hints of strawberry and raspberry, this wine promises to be ideal for pairing with lamb or duck. Corey Creek has announced the release of their 2001 Gewurztraminer. Harvested in the fall of 2001 and fermented in 100% stainless steel for 12 months, this Gewurztraminer is an alternative to Chardonnay. Sources at Corey Creek say the Gewurztraminer is infused with hints of pineapple, melon and papaya, making it complimentary to spicy foods. These wines will be coming to your favorite restaurant and liquor store soon, so keep an eye out or call Bedell Cellars at (631) 734-7537 and Corey Creek at (631) 765-4168.

Don't forget about Taste of the Nation. As previously reported this gala of food and drink will take place at Rubi Red in Wainscott on April 27th from 1 to 5 p.m. There will be live music by Ruth Ann Faye and Phillip Andruela. Participants include Almond, Barefoot Contessa, James Lane Café, Estia, Turtle Crossing, Oasis, Rubi Red, Saracen, Michael's at Maidstone, Schmidts of East Hampton, World Pie and 1770 House. Funds raised will go to local Long Island recipients Island Harvest and Long Island Cares. Tickets are $40 if purchased in advance or $50 if purchased on the day of the event. Call (631) 324-4181 for info.

A final reminder about Hamptons Restaurant Week. The latest list of restaurants providing a $19.95 prix fixe for the week long promotion beginning March 30 are as follows: Della Femina, Pacific East, Nick & Toni's, Rowdy Hall, Oasis, Wild Goose, redbar brasserie, Seafood Barge, Alison by the Beach, The Coast Grill, Tierra Mar, The Plaza Café, George Martin, Almond, Robert's, New Paradise Café, Rubi Red, Mary Jane's, Alison by the Beach and Oakland's Restaurant in Hampton Bays. Also don't forget that Hampton Luxury Liner, Hampton Resort and Hospitality, Hampton Coffee Company, Red Barn B & B, Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards are all participating as well, each with their own discount. For all the specifics go on line to www.wordhampton.com.

East Hampton's Della Femina restaurant will host a wine dinner Sunday, March 30 at 7 p.m. The cost is $85 per person, excluding tax and gratuity. For the evening, chef James Carpenter has created a special menu featuring New Zealand fare and selective wine pairings. The menu includes Peekytoe crab roll with avocado and cucumber gelee; New Zealand rack of lamb, overnight tomato crust with spring green garlic sauce, goat cheese and creamer potato gratin; pinot noir braised oxtail ravioli with okra daube and golden tomato lemon thyme broth; and passion fruit filled chocolate, coconut sorbet and cashew brittle. Mirko's Restaurant

Water Mill Square, Water Mill
631-726-4444

In the Hamptons, just off the beaten path is the place to be. With the maddening crowds on one side and the threat of banality and mediocrity on the other, just off the beaten path offers a respite from both – and the opportunity for a truly exceptional experience. Located in Water Mill Square, just off the highway – but in many ways, miles from the highway – is Mirko's Restaurant, a spot that is widely (and accurately) acclaimed as one of the East End's top restaurants.

I'd been looking forward to reviewing Mirko's for quite some time; I'd heard the rave reviews and it seemed to be less of a Hamptons see-and-be-seen spot than a charming hideaway where you could experience a culinary revelation. Dining at the restaurant on a chilly Thursday evening last week, my expectations were met, exceeded, and at moments completely overwhelmed. Mirko's is a place where the difference between eating in its most literal sense and dining in its most revered sense is revealed.

Chef Mirko Zagar and his wife Eileen have been in Water Mill for twenty years and they serve a loyal following of regulars and newcomers alike who return time and again for Mirko's creative fare. And those who love it, protect it and like to refer Mirko's as their little secret. But clearly, enough people know about it to make it one of the most popular restaurants during all seasons. Stepping inside the restaurant you are greeted by a serene décor: the space is intimate though spacious (you won't be sitting in your neighbor's lap), a fireplace burns cheerfully, and there is a very European countryside sense about the place. Settling ourselves in front of the fire, my friend and I were quickly attended to and we were in store for an exceptional meal designed just for us by the capable hands of our hosts.

We were presented with small portions of a number of the items on the menu, a method that maximizes variety and pleasure simultaneously. Perhaps my favorite dish of the evening was the first, a Pan Seared Calamari with a sauce of lemon, garlic and sherry wine that was absolutely fantastic. Calamari in the wrong hands can be a torturous experience, but Mirko prepared it with a light touch and the dish was tender and flavorful. This would be the dish to start with on a warm summer evening on the patio with a nice Chardonnay. Our second appetizer was a Portobello Mushroom "Pizza" with arugula, goat cheese, caramelized onion and fresh yellow tomato. Pizza is loosely defined here and the dish was a creative take on the norm and it was delicious, intensely flavored and pleasantly light. A few of the appetizers that tempted but weren't tried were the Moroccan Spiced Grilled Quail and the Jumbo Lump Crab Cakes. There's always next time.

Each dish was paired with a wine and the Michel Redde Pouilly Fume and the St. Francis Chardonnay were particularly noteworthy. A small salad of baby arugula, endive and radicchio with toasted pine nuts and goat cheese in a sherry vinaigrette was a lovely segue into the dishes that would follow.

Moving on to the entrees we began with the Pan Roasted Red Snapper with zucchini, yellow squash and carrot "spaghetti" and oven-roasted tomato coulis. My only complaint about this dish was that there wasn't enough of it. That is the curse of small sample portions; when you find something truly remarkable it's gone too soon. If the calamari was my favorite, the snapper was a close second. The snapper was superb and the "spaghetti" was another creative twist that seemed representative of a theme in Mirko's cuisine: light dishes that don't rely on heavy fillers like rice or potatoes. This makes for dishes that are flavorful and perfect for the warm weather ahead.

The second entrée we tried was the Aromatic Braised Beef Short Ribs, which were served with a celery root puree. Fantastically tender, these ribs yielded with a fork and were a perfect finish for a cold winter's night. The flavors merged and warmed us, thus evoking another theme at Mirkos – careful cooking and wonderful ingredients. When I sit down to dine at Mirko's again, assuming I can stop myself from ordering the snapper, I'd definitely like to try the Vegetable Risotto with Grilled Shrimp, or perhaps the Roasted Duck Breast... no, maybe the Black Pepper and Ginger Crusted Salmon – so many tantalizing options.

Desserts are always difficult after five courses, even small ones. I was, however, unable to resist the strawberry or chocolate sorbet (both of which Mirko makes) or the Apple and Blackberry crisp that was served with vanilla ice cream.

Altogether, Mirko's certainly deserves the high praise that it receives. There is, however, a bit of a catch-22 in printing this review. To maintain it's off the beaten path status we can only hope that not too many people read this review, or take the above accolades to heart – or Mirkos will be even more difficult to get a reservation at than it already is.

Mirko's is open Thursday through Sunday during the winter. Outdoor dining is available during the summer. They have a prix fixe menu available on Thursday and Sunday. Prices: appetizers – $13 to $15; salads – $10; entrees – $22 to $34; desserts – $9. There is an extensive wine list; prices are from $38 and up. The majority of wines are in the $40 to $75 range. Wines by the glass are $8.50 to $12.50. For menus, wine lists and further information log on to www.mirkosrestaurant.com.

HAMPTONS RESTAURANT WEEK

Restaurant week in New York is always a welcome respite from the dead of winter: restaurants open their doors, create prix fixe menus at reasonable prices and welcome the public to sample their culinary creations. In a similar spirit, WordHampton, an East End PR firm, has drawn together a number of restaurants to kick of our own Hamptons Restaurant Week. The event, which runs from March 30 to April 6, features some of the best restaurants on the East End, which will offer a hard-to-beat three-course prix fixe for $19.95.

The participating restaurants include: Della Femina, Pacific East, Nick & Toni's, Rowdy Hall, Oasis, Wild Goose, redbar brasserie, Seafood Barge, Alison by the Beach, The Coast Grill, Tierra Mar, The Plaza Café, George Martin, Almond, Robert's, New Paradise Café, Rubi Red, Mary Jane's, Alison by the Beach and Oakland's Restaurant

For additional information contact the restaurant you're interested in dining at or log on to www.wordhampton.com.

Just to whet your appetite, below are a few of the restaurants that will be participating and what they have to offer.

George Martin: This Southampton spot, with its mahogany banquettes and clubby feel, will be offering a wide sample of its superb New American fare. Among the numerous options for appetizers are lobster and corn chowder, sure to be full of plenty of lobster, the well-loved George Martin chopped salad or the rock shrimp and sea scallops ceviche. Move on to hoisin and sesame glazed pork tenderloin, curried seafood linguine, or perhaps something else will strike your fancy. Dinner without dessert is no fun so save some room for the banana spring roll or the George Martin brownie sundae.

56 Nugent St., Southampton, 631-204-8700.

Mary Jane's: Warm, welcoming and comfortable, sitting down at Mary Jane's is a treat in itself – it's Italian with appeal. Start the meal with seafood gumbo served New Orlean's style, or perhaps the roasted vegetable foccaccia is more to you liking? The options abound, and the entrees are just as promising. Cajun catfish rigatoni in a tomato cream sauce, or perhaps Mary Jane's pot roast – and there's always linguine bolognaise with fresh tomatoes basil, andouille sausage, topped with cream. For a sweet finish try the chocolate cappuccino cake or the ultimate tiramisu.

128 North Main St., East Hampton, 631-324-8008.

Pacific East: This upscale Amagansett spot offers some of the finest and most creative cuisine on the East End. From the Asian-influenced menu to the superb sushi, there is a taste to tantalize every diner. Start with Bangkok fish cakes with Thai tartar sauce and Cambodian coleslaw, or the steamed Prince Edward Island mussels in a coconut red curry broth (and that's just two of many from which to choose). In the entrée realm there's a sushi assortment, miso broiled Atlantic salmon, wild New Zealand golden snapper, roasted butternut squash risotto and... more. Finish with sweet sticky rice pudding, Tahitian vanilla crème brulee, or green tea gelato.

415 Main St., Amagansett, 631-267-7770.

Rubi Red: Evoking the mood of the Mediterranean, Rubi Red can be counted on to deliver flavors that will remind you of crystal clear waters and warm nights. Options during restaurant week in the appetizer offerings include the soup of the day, sure to be a flavorful blend, or perhaps a traditional Caesar salad is appealing. Moving on to the selection of entrees the Provence pork loin will surely please, the chicken parmigiana will be delightful, and there's also the farfalle with lamb ragout. Dessert should be a nice finish with a panna cotta chocolate mousse.

About Face... with Annette

Spring Time Bride

There is nothing so special this time of year than that of a spring wedding. Of course, no matter when you choose to do it it's special, but aside from Easter, what have we got going for us? A spring wedding is truly the quintessential breath of spring. Along with all the wonderful colors to choose from, everything seems so much more light and airy.

For one glorious day, the bride shines like no other. The veritable star in the eyes of her family, friends and, of course, the groom. Here is where the focus lies for the entire day, on her. You rehearse everything, so why leave your face and hair to chance? Do a trial run with your makeup artist and hairstylist; take a photo to see how you'll photograph.

During the preview session the makeup artist will look at the brides bone structure and coloring. The time of day also enters the makeup equation. Gown and personality are also taken into consideration. Don't leave your makeup to a friend or someone who dabbles in it. Try to hire someone who does it often and preferably one who does it for photographers. They are the ones who know the damage a camera can do when unprofessional makeup job is applied. When all is said and done, there can be nothing worse than looking shiny and greasy and much worse dated, from the wrong makeup and hair. You want to look timeless in your makeup and hair selections so as not to date yourself. Unless you want to look like a time capsule of the year you were married, insist on makeup shades that are neutral yet chic. Keep your hair classic.

A good skin care regime should be started months before the wedding. Don't use anything unfamiliar in the days and weeks before. Steer clear of doing any major skin scrubs and don't do any at-home exfoliating treatments. Your skin may seem to glow initially but a few days later it may look as though you have been sailing the high seas!

Since there is little time for touchups on the wedding day, choose your makeup carefully opting towards the new long lasting lip colors and bases. Try them well in advance, I can't stress that enough. Some of these colors may stay on your face or lips and cause a stain. Take yourself out in the sunlight and check it at different times to see how long they are lasting without touching up. The sunlight offers the best gauge for doing makeup. We makeup artists are known for taking the models over to any window for application giving the best available light. There is no other place to apply makeup better than natural light outside or by a window. Remember to check for tears from your eyes and hugs and kisses from everyone. Make sure your makeup will hold up.

Choose a hairstyle that will work well with your headpiece on and off. Or perhaps something that will look good at the reception when you may opt to remove it. Something that you can simply remove the pins and lightly brush out the spray and shake into a movable style. Don't forget your little bag of tricks to give someone to hold for you for this.

The last thing to remember is what was said in the beginning.. stay calm, prepared and have all under control. It will pay off in the long run.

Mother Of The Bride

Well Mom, though you have probably imagined the bride's gown in your dreams, chances are you haven't a clue what you are going to wear. Don't worry – today there is no dictate in fashion for mothers of the bride and groom. There is a wide range of choices from minimal and sleek to glamorous and elaborate. As in all fashion, you should wear what looks best on you. The days of the dowdy mother of the bride are thankfully gone for good.

The look could be elegant, sophisticated and modern or all of the above. Modern styles are simple yet luxurious; classic without a dash of the old-fashioned. The presence of Audrey Hepburn and Jackie Kennedy is everywhere. Because today's average bride is 28 and her mother is between 50 and 56, you don't feel old so you shouldn't dress that way.

Remember to flaunt your assets and hide your flaws. It is your day too so don't worry too much about competing with the bride. There is no doubt she will be the most beautiful one at the wedding, no matter what!

If the bride requests you wear a certain color, but you think you look ghastly in the color of her choice, gently ask her if you might wear a different shade. Chances are, she'll agree. If the bride is your daughter,you can be perhaps a little firm? And if she's your daughter-in-law, she'll want to please your son!

Invest in the best your pocketbook allows. For this special day you may even want to splurge a bit. Every fashionable look is abundant at every bridal and department store, and even online, at every price. Bloomingdale's and other national chains create some of the best designer copies around, but many manufacturers offer sensational styling at more reasonable prices.

Beautiful. Elegant. Modern. Timeless. Chic. Words to describe the way you want to look on your child's wedding day. Photographs last forever and so do memories. This is the day you've secretly dreamed about for decades! It won't come again (hopefully) so invest the time and dollars in an outfit you adore.

Some great places online to look: www.sparklesbridal.com,www.plus-size.com, www.alfredsungbridesmaids.com www.forevermoments.com and www.101bridalgown.com

If a dress isn't comfortable, by all means check out some of the formal and not so formal pants suits. They seem to be the "thing" lately at weddings. There is nothing written in any book of etiquette stating a mother has to wear a gown or dress. I have seen some of the most elegant, feminine, "tux" styles. Some may have some ornamentation on them and some not. Take a look.

There is a wonderful book entitled, The Mother of the Bride:Giving Your Daughter a Wonderful Wedding ($13.26 at www.amazon.com). It encompasses things that a mother may be asked to do. Tasks such as helping pull together the guest list, helping with the seating arrangements, organizing an engagement party, arranging lodging for out-of-town guests, hiring the band and the caterers. Be there for the bride if she wishes; once knee deep in reality she'll welcome your help.

Relax, and have a wonderful day!

Did You Know?

Here's a few fun facts about Coppertone Sun Tan Lotion:

Dr. Benjamin Green, a physician from Miami, Florida, helped the United States military develop sunscreen to protect soldiers stationed in the South Pacific during World War II from getting severe sunburns. After the war, he noticed that tourists in Miami used all kinds of home-made concoctions to bronze in the sun. He began experimenting with different formulas, using his own bald head as a testing ground, until he came up with the recipe for Coppertone suntan cream with the essence of jasmine in 1944.

A picture of an Indian chief was on the first bottles of Coppertone, accompanied by the slogan "Don't be a Paleface." Little Miss Coppertone replaced him in 1953.

To figure out how many hours of protection you can expect from a sunscreen, take the number of minutes it takes your skin to start burning without sunscreen, multiply by the sun protection factor (SPF) printed on the bottle of Coppertone, and divide the result by 60. For instance, if you usually burn in 30 minutes, an SPF 8 lotion should protect you for approximately 4 hours.

The higher the SPF of a sunscreen, the higher the price.

The higher in the sky the sun is, the higher the SPF number you need. Also, the closer to the equator you are, the stronger the sunscreen you need.

Never use a sunscreen that is more than a year old. Abide by the expiration dates.

The List: Rip This Out Of The Paper

That green (or brown) stuff out in front of your house? That's the grass. Haven't seen too much grass this winter, so your confusion is understandable. But Spring is here, it arrived officially last week, and the temperatures have been feeling seasonally appropriate, so what follows is a list (and a fairly long one which is in no particular order) of things that need to get done around the house before everyone starts inviting themselves over for Memorial Day weekend. There are some things that may have been missed, but this is a good start. Just tear this out of the paper and start puttering around the yard and checking things off.

1. Fertilize the lawn: a fertilized lawn will be a happy lawn in the weeks ahead.
2. Get the vegetable garden tilled and fertilized: then start dreaming of tomatoes in August.
3. Prepare the flowerbeds around the house: flowers are pretty and planting can begin in a couple weeks.
4. Trim the bushes/ hedges/ trees: after a long cold winter the dead branches have to go so that the bushes/ hedges/ trees can grow healthy and happy.
5. If you're planning any major landscaping changes, this is the time to do it.
6. Plant some herbs.
7. Start thinking about getting the pool cover off and getting the pool ready for the summer sun.
8. Clean up all the leaves and branches that fell around the yard during the winter.
9. Fix the driveway, you know, where the plow guy dug a trench in the grass at the edge of the driveway.
10. If you feel like getting a bit messy and you have a blacktop driveway, think about sealing it: in the middle of the summer this is a miserable job.

11. Get the tennis court in shape.
12. The tennis court surface should be repaired if need be and the net can go up.
13. Start playing tennis outside: you'll be on the beach before you know it and it's time to work off some of the winter weight.
14. Check around the house for spots that may need some painting touch ups.
15. Railings and trim around the house can take a beating during the winter, so a quick scrape, prime and paint job can make for a leisurely Saturday afternoon.
16. If you have storm windows, take them out.
17. Clean the windows.
18. Power wash the house: sometimes this will suffice and you won't need to paint. It will also get all the mold etc. off the house and deck.
19. Fix any damage that was done by water and the winter: cracked and damaged boards, paint, gutters etc.
20. Wash your car: salt is bad.
21. Start thinking about a Spring cleaning: top to bottom, throughout the entire house.
22. Fix any bricks/stones on the patio that were pushed out of place by ice and water during the winter.
23. Sit ups: almost time to bare the belly, so start now.
24. Clean the garage: you won't want to when the

The New Home For The BBQ

Oh, sweet summer just around the corner and nearly upon us. The days will be warm, the sun will be bright, the grass will be green and you'll be out in the backyard barbecuing. There's definitely a difference between having the perfect spot and having an acceptable spot, so ask yourself this:

Have you been on the fence about building a new deck? There's news that could make your decision easier: New types of decking can make building a deck simple. Here's a few ideas from the experts:

Material-If you're looking for a low maintenance alternative, decking such as Weyerhaeuser's ChoiceDek may be worth considering. It never needs sealing or treating and is made from recycled plastic and wood chips. It's water resistant, so it won't splinter, crack or rot when exposed to water.

Railings/Lighting-Lighting can be a great addition to any landscaping but many homeowners are uncomfortable working with electrical wiring. ChoiceDek offers a decorative railing system that is notched for easier assembly-it also includes hidden channels for lighting wire that can easily attach to fixtures.

Hot Tub-If a hot tub fits into your plans, be sure to purchase a decking product that can handle moisture. Most decking can't handle high moisture without continual maintenance.

For more information and local retailers on ChoiceDek, please call 1-877-235-6873.

List (continued from previous page)

sun is warm and the beach is calling.
25. Put the snow shovels/bags of salt and sand away.
26. Take out the beach chairs.
27. Get the kids play stuff out of the basement and fix the sandbox.
28. Take out the lawn furniture, tables, chairs, chaise lounges etc.
29. Get the grill out: steaks on the barby, grill some fish, fire up the flame.
30. Try some new recipes so you can look like a pro when the riffraff show up.
31. Get an extra propane tank and fill both of them up. Or get charcoal and some lighter fluid.
32. Take a look around the kitchen and figure out if there's anything you need to get.
33. Take down the Christmas tree and Christmas lights.
34. A few cold nights are still ahead so keep a stack of firewood nearby, but stack and cover the rest.
35. Call a landscaper and cut a deal to have the lawn mowed over the summer.
36. If you don't call a landscaper, make sure your mower is ready for the long, green grass ahead.
37. Buy some new planters and pots: winter weather can wreck them so see what you need.
38. Fill the oil tank one last time.
39. If you're renting your house, make sure everything you don't want the renters to have their hands on is stored.
40. Stock the wine cellar: whites are nice warm weather sippers and reds go well with steaks on the grill.
41. Find a new kind of flower that you want to try in the garden.
42. Start a compost heap: get back to green and forget about the garbage disposal.
43. Make sure there are no leaks in the roof caused by winter freezing.
44. Is it time to get a couple new pieces of furniture?
45. Get the garden tools out and sharpened: see if there's anything you need.
46. Clean the air conditioner and get it ready to cool down the house.
47. If you're not one of the intrepid winter surfers, get out your board and get ready to rip.
48. Clean the air vents and ducts and replace air filters.
49. Think warm thoughts
50. Stop and smell the roses.

And best of all: hire someone and give them the list.

Police Blotter

East Enders worthy of mention in this week's Blotter made the Hamptons possess somewhat of a day-time talk show quality. Faculty at the East Hampton High School called police last week in response to the actions of a 17-year-old girl gone wild. It all started that day when it was discovered that the girl was drunk. She was sent to the nurse's office to await the arrival of her guardian, but when the call was made she ran. An officer on the scene tried to coax the girl back to school, but she refused. As the girl shouted obscenities and onlookers watched the spectacle, police arrested her and charged her with disorderly conduct. She was released to her guardian a short time later with an appearance ticket for the future.

Our next guest gained fame in a less inebriated state and a more violent manner. Police responded to the East Hampton train station last Sunday night to find a man lying unconscious on the pavement bleeding from a head wound. Witnesses told officers the man had been in a fight and pointed them towards the train station where the other half of the fight had allegedly wandered off to. Police located the 18-year-old Hampton Bays man and arrested him, charging him with second degree assault.

The next teenage trouble maker ultimately found herself behind bars in East Hampton Town P.D. An officer traveled out to the Nassau County Police Department to transport the girl on a bench warrant issued by East Hampton Town. When he picked her up he found 8.8 grams of cocaine stashed in her belongings. The coke was confiscated and the girl placed in a cell. She was charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance.

What do you do when you discover someone has damaged two of your cars and obliterated the split rail fence outside your home and you don't know who "someone" is? You need to hope the culprit is as honest as these next two. According to East Hampton Town Police, a gentleman was in an accident involving just himself, two parked cars and a split rail fence and then left the scene. Later that day, the owner of the damaging vehicle came into headquarters with a 28-year-old East Hampton man who admitted he was the unlicensed driver in said accident. He was processed and released on $100 bail after being charged with leaving the scene of an accident. East Hampton Police also fined the car owner for permitting the unlicensed use of his vehicle.

Police speculate teenagers are to blame for a recent break-in at a Laura's Lane residence in East Hampton. A caretaker of the house called police in mid-March when he noticed a broken window in the basement and $400 worth of lumber missing. Taking a further look through the house, he found "sticky stains" on the kitchen floor, which police say were made by beer and soda. No suspects are being sought out at this time.

IRREFUTABLE PROOF
Dear Dan,

Did you happen to get any pictures of the great Ecuadorian eel last week at trout pond? If not I have one for you. It was very funny!

Julie
Via Email

We took pictures but the eel ate the camera. –D.R.

WHAT'S THE EEL DEAL?
Dear Dan,

I read an article about the incident at Trout Pond involving the hunter from Ronkonkoma and the giant eel. Why was this not reported in the newspaper? I would think that something of this nature would be important to public safety. Is this eel still out in the wild? Is it true that an eel was responsible for five deaths four years ago? This is the first time I heard about this. I am puzzled.

I also read that one was caught in the Hamptons but could not be transported through Manhattan... The article was Giuliani Said No since Giuliani is no longer mayor apparently this article is a bit dated. What happened to the eel that was caught?

I am anxious for your reply.

Kathleen MacDonald

He got away again. We think this was the same eel, five years later. –D.R.

JUST OUR GENERAL EXCELLENCE
Dear Dan,

I just wanted to let you know that the recent article by you in Dan's Papers regarding Iraq entitled "My Way" was outstanding.

Howard Richard
East Hampton

IS THAT YOU GEORGE?
Dear Dan,

I loved your story about the Sherman tanks. However, I think of myself more as a Tiger tank. After all, a tiger fights fiercely when aroused and, there's nothing more exciting than the threat of war, except war itself!

KEELL THEE EEL – PLEEASE!
Dear Dan,

I appreciate you taking the time to write these articles, but I have a co-worker that will not stop talking about this damn eel. We all here at the office know this story is an invention of yours. But our damn friend is taking it to the extreme. Please contact our friend (Rich) and explain to him, that talking about this eel that much might get people to hate looking at your paper.

Thanks. A concerned reader and fed up co-worker.

Sam Rabie
Via email

Hi Rich. –D.R.

EVERYBODY'S GOT AN OPINION
Dear Dan,

As a devoted reader of your magazine, I have been disappointed by your multi-issue fascination with President Bush's foreign policy. Your article My Way in this week's edition in particular leads me to believe that you are, to use your words in describing President Bush, not the right man for the job – at least when it comes to opining on matters east of Montauk Point.

I am baffled that someone with such an aversion to fundamentalism, or rigid adherence to a guiding set of principles, yearns for a Franklin D. Roosevelt or Winston Churchill to go about the business of "armoring our country."

FDR was a man who viewed the United States as an "Arsenal of Democracy" and, believing that "there can be no appeasement with ruthlessness," strove to make Europe safe for democracy in spite of a hostile Congress. Similarly Churchill derided proponents of appeasement, as individuals who hoped the crocodile would eat them last. Believing in the nobility of his cause, he prosecuted war against Nazi Germany despite the unwillingness of neutral nations like Denmark and Norway to participate (until they were themselves conquered, it should be noted). If such resolve is fundamentalism, then I certainly wish there were more fundamentalists in positions of power.

You acknowledge, "Al Qaeda fighters are trying to kill us. He, (President Bush) should deal with it." This is a very easy statement to make when no reference is made to what "dealing with it" entails. You further state that we are currently living in a world where terrorists are "changing the rules."

Indeed, the rules have changed to the point where the mere notion of "armoring the country" is bleary-eyed at best and unthinkable as a sole means of security post-September 11. We instead need a coherent policy of locating and eliminating the potential apparatus of terror whenever and wherever it may lie, and before it is put to use. In this mission we must be deliberate and unwavering. Ideally, other members of the international community will join us, but we must not rely on their imprimatur to act.

The price of inaction is too great.

While I respect your right of opinion, I am disappointed that your apparent practice of historical research and reasoned argument seemingly does not apply to this topic.

Although diversion from the topic of Ecuadorian eels is welcome from time to time (Ecuador, by the way, is emerging as an ally of the Bush administration and may have sent the eels to assist in allied war efforts). You should keep in mind the high expectation that you have set amongst your readership.

Chris Whalen
New York City

FDR only declared war after we were attacked at Pearl Harbor. Churchill only declared war after Hitler invaded Poland, with who england had a mutual defense treaty. –D.R.

Weddings by the sea... there is nothing more romantic for a young couple.

Dear Customer,

Thank you for considering our company for your fencing needs. I would like to tell you about Consumer Fence, as well as educate you about our industry. There are some key points you need to be made aware of as you are in the process of making a large investment. There are many options and styles for you to choose from. That is why it is so important to ask questions and to know the product. In the outline to follow you will learn what it is you need to look for when deciding on a fence.

1. Knowledge of the Product

You should know exactly what you are receiving as far as quality and material components. As you know, P.V.C. has become the most popular fencing product. The plastic division of our company has continually increased 30% each year for the last three years. Research the type of vinyl being used. We fabricate (build on our premises) "virgin vinyl" or "mono extruded." This is true vinyl in its purest form. It is the strongest, will hold up to the elements better and should not discolor. On the other hand, others use "co extruded vinyl" which can be recycled materials on the inside and virgin only on the outer layer. This is a cheaper route for other companies to take. The construction of all the privacy panels include a 2" x 8" bottom rail. This prevents sagging at the bottom of your fence, obviously a very important detail to ask about. The gate , whether you choose one or two remains the most important element of your fence. We build our gates on a 5' x 5' frame. The gates are thick and rigid. This creates a solid and sturdy beginning for the years of use to come. Inside the frame of our gate are sockets which hold the gate together. We then hang the gates on stainless steel hardware, which which holds up the best compared to all other materials.

2. Workmanship

Your job will be done with the finest precision and knowledge in the industry. The installers working for Consumer Fence in all three locations are professionals who have been with us for over 12 years. Fencing is a seasonal business, and I have made a commitment to keep all of my employees in their job for all twelve months of the year. Here at Consumer Fence we are proud of our 92% employee retention rate. Most companies lay their staff off at the end of the season. This usually causes what I like to call "company jumping." When this occurs, the customer winds up with an inexperienced , unprofessional crew to install their fence. The end result being a very unpleasant, frustrating experience.

From Consumer Fence as well as Homeland Vinyl Products, Inc., you will receive a lifetime and transferable warranty. That speaks for itself. Virgin vinyl - the only product to use.

3. Pricing

We believe your price quote is also an important detail in your decision. Many consumers wonder why there can be such drastic differences in price between companies. There are a few different reasons why:

A. Material being purchased in bulk, lowering costs.

B. The quality of the grade you are purchasing
(ie: #1 cedar / spruce or #2 cedar / spruce, virgin vinyl or recycled vinyl)

These are the ploys many companies use, especially if you are not knowledgeable in these areas.

Consumer Fence is a family business dedicated to you, the consumer. We have over 18 years of experience and it is important to us that you feel comfortable from the first phone call to the end result. We believe that our commitment to fabricate and install the best P.V.C., wood and chain link systems will leave our customers very satisfied.

Thank you for choosing Consumer Fence.
